U.S. trumped over Tito rites

Times News Services

BELGRADE — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev arrived in Belgrade today to attend the funeral of Josip Broz Tito amid European press criticism of U.S. President Carter for failing to make the trip.

Brezhnev arrived at the head of a Soviet delegation that also included Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and the Soviet ambassador to Yugoslavia, Nicholai Radionov.

West German newspapers described Brezhnev's visit to Belgrade as diplomatic one-upmanship highlighting Carter's uncertain foreign policy and making a mockery of his pledge to support Yugoslavia's independence.

The Sueddeutsche Zeitung saw Brezhnev's visit as a skillfully timed diplomatic trick, and suggested snidely that "Carter, apparently, wants to punish the Soviet leadership by ignoring them."

And in London, The Times said Carter's decision not to attend was another grave mistake by a "muddled" man "blind to whole areas of reality."

In a lead editorial, The Times said Carter showed himself "blind to the stature of President Tito, to the importance of Yugoslavia, to the mood of the Yugoslav people, to the interests of the United States and, once again, to the sound views of his own department of state."

When the Yugoslavs look around at Tito's funeral "for the superpower on whom, if all else fails, they may have to rely for their security and independence, and what do they see? They see Mr. Carter's mother and Mr. Mondale".

Moscow "trumped us," said an American journalist who has covered Eastern Europe for many years. He said Brezhnev's unexpected visit was aimed at driving "a wedge between the United States and its allies."

Yugoslav officials, while saying nothing publicly, privately indicated that they would have preferred to see Carter, the acknowledged leader of the West, at the funeral of a man who defied the Kremlin and tried keep a carefully balanced position between East and West.

A White House official said Carter decided to skip the funeral because he believed it would be inappropriate to make a foreign trip while American hostages were still being held in Iran.

In his stead, Carter sent U.S. Vice-president Mondale and his mother, Lillian, to represent the United States at Thursday's funeral for the founder of modern Yugoslavia and co-founder of the nonaligned bloc of nations. The funeral is shaping up as one of the biggest gatherings of world leaders in modern history.

Mondale arrived shortly before Brezhnev and reaffirmed in a statement that the U.S. would stand behind 30 years of support for Yugoslavia's independence, territorial integrity and unity. "It has not changed with the passing of their great leader," he said.

In Washington, meanwhile, it was reported that the U.S. Secretary of State-designate Sen. Edmund Muskie will meet in Vienna next week with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Gromyko and Muskie will be in Vienna next week for ceremonies marking the 25th anniversary of the treaty that gave Austria its post-war independence.

The meeting will be the first U.S.-Soviet Union encounter at the ministerial level since the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan began last December.

(The Senate foreign relations committee today approved Muskie's nomination to replace Cyrus Vance in the key administration post, paving the way for its confirmation by the full Senate.)

Trudeau answer on coal deal aid angers Bennett

Canadian Press

B.C.'s multi-million dollar coal deal with Japan — bogged down in political red tape as the federal and provincial governments haggle over financial commitments — has hit another snag.

The B.C. government, which has reached approval in principle with the Japanese to export 5.3 million tonnes of metallurgical coal a year, has been trying to get more federal money for a spur line into the northeastern B.C. coal fields.

Some additional money appeared certain after a meeting of federal-provincial cabinet ministers in Victoria on Monday.

Senator Bud Olson, economic development minister, told a news conference Ottawa's commitment to the "over-all requirement to get coal into export position was enhanced as a result of this meeting."

However, government sources now say Premier Bill Bennett was irate after Tuesday's meeting in Vancouver with Prime Minister Trudeau when Trudeau indicated he wanted concessions on the Alaska Highway pipeline project.

The provincial government has been trying for two years to get Ottawa to discuss federal support for roads, schools and townsite development that will be neccessary when the pipeline, which will cross through northern B.C., is built.

The government source says Trudeau surprised Bennett with his demand that B.C. will have to drop its request for federal funding for the pipeline infrastructure in exchange for the increased support from Ottawa for the northeast coal proposal.

Bennett held a special cabinet meeting this morning to discuss the coal negotiations but had no comment when the meeting ended.

B.C. Industry Minister Don Phillips wouldn't say what was discussed at the cabinet meeting but said he was confident the two governments could resolve their differences.

"A pipeline is a pipeline is a pipeline and a railway is a railway is a railway . . . we'll negotiate the two of them separately," he said.

There has been talk that the province will go ahead with the project, which is expected to provide an estimated $70 million a year to provincial coffers.

Meanwhile, Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira left Canada today with a strong indication that if this country wants to ship more than rocks and unfinished goods to his country, its policy on foreign investment should be "as liberal as possible."

Speaking at a news conference Tuesday after two days of talks here and in Ottawa with Prime Minister Trudeau, Ohira said he understood Canada's desire to ship more job-producing, finished products to Japan.

Air Canada 1979 profit at $55.4M

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada's after-tax profit rose 14 per cent to a record $55.4 million in 1979, enabling the airline to return a dividend of $13.2 million to the federal government.

Claude Taylor, Air Canada's president and chief executive officer, said Tuesday the airline "has proven itself to be commercially successful" while at the same time fulfilling "its mandate of public service."

However, he said in his annual report that rising costs — and consumer resistance to higher air fares — may have a negative impact on earnings this year.

Taylor said fares rose about 10 per cent in 1979, compared with an increase of about 32 per cent by airlines in the United States. He added that Air Canada's fares "must inevitably rise" further this year in the face of increased fuel costs and continuing inflation.

During 1979, the airline carried 12.8 million passengers and 158,950 tons of cargo. Special low fares for surplus seats attracted nearly 400,000 passengers.

Embassy death toll now 7

Times News Services

LONDON — Police today put the death toll in the Iranian embassy siege at seven — five terrorists and two hostages — after firemen removed the remains of the last three bodies from the building

With one terrorist in custody, police said this confirmed suspicions that there were six gunmen in the Iranian Arab gang that seized the embassy last Wednesday and took 26 persons, mostly Iranians, hostage.

Iran's revolutionary government said it will ask for the extradition of the surviving terrorist, but Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was reported determined to resist the request.

Meanwhile, investigators at Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist squad said the rifles, machine guns and hand grenades used by a half dozen gunmen to storm the Iranian embassy last week may have been smuggled into Britain in diplomatic pouches.

The siege ended Monday when Britain's Special Air Service commando regiment stormed the embassy, killing five of the terrorists and rescuing the remaining 19 hostages.

One hostage, press attache Abbas Lavasani, was executed by the terrorists Monday.

The body of a second hostage killed, Ali Akbar Samadzadeh, was taken from the rubble today, police said. Five had been released earlier.

Two hostages remained in a hospital. One, Akmed Dadgar, was reported still in serious condition with gunshot wounds. The other, Charge d'Affaires Gholam-Ali Afrouz, was said to be in satisfactory condition.

Autopsies were being performed on the victims and until results were known police would not confirm that the terrorists were killed by commando gunfire. Police also declined to comment on the identities of the gunmen.

The surviving terrorist, whose identity police have not revealed, was held under special armed guard at a London police station.

Quoting a spokesman for Iran's ruling Revolutionary Council, Radio Tehran said today that as soon as his name was announced, the Iranian Foreign Ministry would ask for his extradition.

But police sources said he will be tried in Britain for murder and kidnapping.

Saudis curbing travel by women

BEIRUT (AP) — Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia has barred women from travelling abroad to study, a Saudi newspaper reports.

The desert kingdom, wary of "unfavorable" influences in the West, is also taking steps to keep its young men at home, according to reports reaching here.

Even women accompanied by their husbands are forbidden to leave Saudi Arabia for study, Fahd was quoted as saying by the newspaper Al Jazira.

Informed sources here said the orders were prompted by the tragic love affair between Princess Misha and a suitor. The two were executed in 1977 in accordance with the Islamic penalty for adultery.

A television documentary about the affair entitled Death of a Princess drew strong protests from the oil-producing desert kingdom when it was shown recently in Britain. The princess had first met her Saudi lover at the American University of Beirut.

Saudi state radio, monitored here, quoted Defence Minister Nayef Bin Abdel Aziz as saying Tuesday that the number of Saudi males studying abroad will be kept to a minimum.

Saudi students abroad are "subjected to unfavorable social influences of the Western societies," the radio quoted Nayef as complaining.

The crown prince's reported orders preceded ratification of an ambitious $300-billion five-year development plan, prompting one news commentator here to question the wisdom of pressing for economic development without educated women.

Liquor taxes provide jolt

Consumers got a jolt in liquor stores today as federal excise tax increases pushed the price of some products up by $1 or more.

The excise tax changes announced in April took effect this morning.

In addition, some products were going up in any case.

As a result, many brands of vodka, rum and brandy were up more than $1 as of today.

There were also signficant price increases for wines.

The federal excise tax changes effective today include an additional 35 and-a-half cents on brandy, 43 cents on fortified wines and 11 cents on spirits.

Beer prices were increased on April 23.

Slapstick survival for SC

By JAKE BANKY

The Socred government teetered on the brink of a serious embarrassment Tuesday but managed to survive, if still a little red in the face.

For a while it appeared the NDP had caught the government napping and was going to defeat the Socreds on a vote in the legislature.

In scenes more appropriate to slapstick comedy than parliamentary propriety, the Socreds managed to pull a 26-26 tie vote out of the fire.

The tie meant an automatic defeat for an NDP challenge of a ruling by Deputy Speaker Walter Davidson.

The NDP claimed she is barred from doing so under the provisions of the Constitution Act.

Civil servants indicate she has been collecting her $31,500 MLA's salary but not the additional $24,000-a-year minister's stipend.

Jordan herself said absolutely nothing.

She would not tell the legislature Tuesday whether she had or had not collected a full minister's salary since her appointment Jan. 11.

And she refused to come out of the house to speak with reporters.

On a bulletin board just outside the chamber someone posted an envelope with the message: Patricia Jordan Salary Fund. Give generously.

Several NDP members dropped in their loose change.

The NDP came into the house obviously aware that the odds — usually 30-26 in favor of the Socreds, not counting the Speaker — had been drastically reduced.

Every NDP seat was filled but there were several gaps in the Socred ranks.

Premier Bill Bennett, Intergovernmental Relations Minister Garde Gardom and Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt were attending official functions in Vancouver and Speaker Harvey Schroeder is still on the sick list.

While Bennett has said he would not feel compelled to call an election if he lost a vote in the legislature, such a defeat would be considered a serious embarrassment.

The action started when Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber called for an emergency debate on the possibility that Jordan had been receiving her minister's salary illegally.

Barber told the house the Constitution Act permits appointment of up to 23 cabinet ministers but clearly states that no more than 19 of them may receive a salary.

Jordan was the 20th minister appointed to the present cabinet.

"If she has been in re-

ceipt of a salary, the law has been violated and payments have been made improperly. If she has not received a salary, once again the government has made an astonishing error," Barber said.

He called it a blunder of the same order as the Socred government's inadvertent deregulation of Seaboard Insurance Corp. last year.

Barber steered clear of mentioning the penalty in the act for any MLA found by the legislature to be in contravention of the act:

"The member shall forthwith cease to be a member and his seat shall be vacated," the penalty reads.

Davidson said he would reserve his decision but the opposition — amid great uproar from the government benches where the light was beginning to dawn — pressed for an immediate answer.

Davidson persisted in reserving decision and the NDP formally challenged the ruling.

As the delays continued, Graham Lea (NDP-Prince Rupert) shouted across the floor: "What are we waiting for, the three wise men from the east?" — a reference to the missing ministers.

Eventually Davidson ruled the NDP challenge was in order and the roll was called.

After the tie vote, Gary Lauk (NDP-Vancouver Centre) hurled an election challenge, tongue-in-cheek.

"Issue the writ," he called, as his colleagues broke up in laughter.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis told reporters he will make a statement on the Jordan matter but he did not say when.

He, too, refused to say whether Jordan has been getting her full salary.

Attorney-General Allan Williams said the government has known about the situation since January and intends to amend the act to correct the anomaly.

However, he indicated the government does not consider it a matter of urgency.

"How can you have a sense of urgency in this house?" he asked sarcastically.

NDP leader Dave Barrett said Williams' attitude is even more serious than any possible contravention of the Constitution Act.

"It's inexcusable to keep this matter secret all these months," he said.

Barber suggested that even if Jordan did not collect a minister's salary, she probably did collect money for ministerial expenses and that would also put her in contravention of the act.

However a close scrutiny of the act revealed that under a revision carried out last year, this provision was removed and accepting expense money would be in order for Jordan.

Clerk of the legislature Ian Horne could not recall another such tie vote in all his 25 years in the house.

Clean house, MPs warned

OTTAWA (CP) — Auditor-General J.J. Macdonell has told MPs they must put their own house in order while seeking to run the affairs of the nation.

Macdonell gave the warning in a report after an almost year-long study of the operations of the House of Commons and its 3,100 employees.

A Commons committee under Progressive Conservative MP Robert Coates, national party president, went behind closed doors today to discuss the report with the auditor-general, whom it had asked to make the study.

There was no indication Tuesday when or whether the report would be released to the public.

Those who have seen the thick study say Macdonell shies away from horror stories and makes many recommendations for bringing the Commons operations and financial procedures into the 1980s.

Macdonell notes the Commons has grown from a $9.6-million-a-year operation with 916 employees and 265 MPs in 1965 to a $96.6-million operation with 3,124 employees and 282 MPs today.

The big increase is the result of more services for MPs in Ottawa and in their constituencies, and the introduction of television into the Commons chamber.

In the process of expanding, Commons management procedures have lagged behind its increasing responsibilities, Macdonell says.

The report is being studied by the Commons management and member services committee while:

—There is growing unrest among the Commons staff about changes already made by the deputy auditor-general, who was appointed temporary administrator last year.

—Horror stories of inefficiency, getting jobs for sexual favors, overpayment of senior staff and other matters have surfaced in interviews over the last few weeks — at the same time as general praise for the bulk of the Commons staff, considered by most MPs to be highly motivated and dedicated.

In the latter connection, Liberal MP Lloyd Francis (Ottawa West) said before he was named deputy Commons speaker at the opening of Parliament that he knew of cases where females had to go to bed with supervisors to get promotions.

Last year, Macdonell wrote an interim report which strongly condemned the way the Commons is run.

Interviews have indicated some of the things about which he is talking.

People who decline to be quoted for fear of retribution talk of sexual favors, drunkenness, favoritism and rank inefficiency.

They say top officers in the bureaucracy have given themselves the highest pay possible — up to $45,000 a year — more than the $30,000 salary of MPs.

Record sales, 10,400 layoffs

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. has announced the layoff of 10,400 workers at four assembly plants, only a day after reporting record sales for April.

GM Canada spokesman Nick Hall said Tuesday the Oshawa-based company is shutting down two car-assembly plants and a truck plant for one week, starting May 26. The move will put 8,700 workers out of work.

In addition, GM will close its Scarborough, Ont., van plant for three weeks, affecting 1,700 workers.

Hall says the shutdowns are needed to balance inventories for the end of the 1980 model year, which has seen small car sales remain strong while inventories of larger cars have piled up.

Cell designer shot to death

ROME (AP) — Four terrorists, including a woman, raided the studio of a man who designed a Rome prison where leftists and others are held, shooting him in the head and wounding him seriously, police said.

Police said the four terrorists fired a pistol shot in the back of the head of Sergio Lenci.

Trudeau angers Bennett

But he indicated this might not come about until there was more Japanese investment in Canada in industries that could export finished goods to Japan and other countries.

And he suggested that while it was up to the individual companies to decide, there might be investment in automotive parts plants in Canada for shipment to planned assembly plants in the United States.

"We would hope your policy with regard to acceptance of foreign investments would be as liberal as possible," he said, speaking through a translator.

He also indicated other elements of an improved investment climate in Canada were labor stability and increased investment in roads and railways to undeveloped areas.

Less than a month ago, the speech from the throne setting out Liberal legislative plans promised to tighten controls on foreign investment.

Canadian governments also have been complaining for years, as they did in the latest talks this week, that Japan regards this country too much as a source of raw materials and does not pay enough attention to its industrial prowess.

Japan is Canada's second-largest trading partner after the U.S. but its $4 billion in purchases annually are made up mostly of raw materials such as coal and copper as well as agricultural products and fish.

Canada has been hoping to make a breakthrough in the high-technology area with sale of an $800-million Candu nuclear reactor.

But Ohira told his news conference Japan's atomic energy commission has ruled out any purchase at this time. He added this doesn't preclude purchase of a Candu in the future.

And it was announced in Tokyo today that Japan plans to send a team of experts to Canada within a few months to help determine whether it should buy the Candu nuclear reactor.

A spokesman for the Japanese ministry of international commerce and industry said the ministry will spend 700 million yen (about $3.5 million) of its 1980 budget to study the heavy-water reactor, which if purchased would reduce Japan's dependence on enriched uranium imported from the United States.

Ohira was the guest of Trudeau at a glittering dinner Tuesday night attended by 1,000 people where the two leaders praised the growth of the Japan-Canada relationship and Trudeau paid tribute to the economic and cultural achievements of Japanese society.

But Trudeau also used the occasion to say he hoped finished and manufactured products would play an increasing role in trade between the two countries.

Bribery a custom

MOSCOW (AFP) — The daily newspaper Sovietskaya Rossiya said bribery of doctors in the Soviet Union in cases of surgery, injections and other treatment has become a custom.

No worry a worry

CALGARY (CP) — Canada's biggest problem is that it doesn't have any problems, Herman Kahn, an author and public policy analyst, said Tuesday.

"Canada seems to have the worst malaise with the least reason," he told a conference on the future. "It's totally neurotic."

Kahn, founder of the Hudson Institute in New York, said Canadians have the lowest morale of any citizens. "You wouldn't have the Quebec problem if you had high morale," he said.

B.C. Tel earnings $12M

BURNABY (CP) — B.C. Telephone Co. reported Tuesday net earnings for its telecommunications and manufacturing operations were $12,290,000 or 41 cents a share for the first three months of 1980, compared with $9,857,000 or 39 cents a share for the first quarter of 1979.

The 1980 results included earnings of $3,853,000 from B.C. Tel's manufacturing subsidiary, AEL Microtel Ltd., which was acquired Sept. 29, 1979.

Company chairman Gordon F. MacFarlane said in a news release he was concerned about the downturn in earnings from the company's telecommunications operation from the first quarter of 1979. Net earnings from that operation were $8.4 million, compared with $9.8 million in 1979.

Acquittal appealed

LILLOOET (CP) — The Crown is appealing the recent acquittal of Progressive Conservative MP Lorne Greenaway on charges of obstructing a federal fisheries officer.

Provincial court Judge G.W. Lamperson dismissed the charge April 10 after ruling the Crown failed to present sufficient evidence for conviction.

Greenaway, the member for Cariboo-Chilcotin, was charged last year following an incident near Lillooet in which local Indians were demonstrating in support of native fishing rights.

The appeal, filed Tuesday, is expected to be heard in August.

Trial adjourned

KITIMAT (CP) — The trial of former Surrey mayor Ed McKitka, charged with common assault, was adjourned Monday in provincial court to Aug. 21, a year from the date of the incident leading to the charge.

The charge was laid by Terry Gresl of Kitimat, who alleges he was struck on the head during an altercation at a go-cart track here.

Crown prosecutor Jeff Arndt said the trial was adjourned because a witness did not appear.

Bigger prison probable at Agassiz location

VANCOUVER (CP) — Agassiz Mountain Prison probably will be rebuilt — and enlarged — on its present controversy-charged Fraser Valley site.

A prison official said that with a go-ahead, the prison would be rebuilt, unit by unit, while containing a prison population throughout the redevelopment.

The prison population would rise to more than 300 from the current 186.

In Ottawa, meanwhile, Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan said Tuesday preliminary reports show there are no maximum-security prisoners at a medium-security prison in Agassiz.

Kaplan also said he would be willing to meet this weekend, if it can be arranged, with residents of the Fraser Valley community, concerned about security at the institution after a recent escape.

The solicitor-general leves Friday for Vancouver for the official closing of the notorious B.C. Penitentiary and to visit other prisons in the province.

More than 20 of the 130 prisoners at Mountain Prison are reported to be convicted murderers, but Kaplan said classification officers have told him none still are classified as maximum security risks.

About 500 area residents met Sunday with Senator Ray Perrault to air their concerns.

The long-simmering problem erupted after an area man was found stabbed to death recently, the day after a prisoner had escaped. The prisoner, siknce recaptured, has been charged with second-degree murder.

Mountain Prison is almost adjacent to the Kent maximum-security prison, built to replace the century-old B.C. Pen.

Authorities said Tursday that a prisoner in protective custody hanged himself Monday in a cell at Kent.

Archie Pete, 25, serving concurrent five-year sentences for rape and intent to wound, was pronounced dead on arrival at Chilliwack Hospital.

Slump forces 192 Mac-Blo layoffs

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. announced Tuesday 160 of its employees will be out of work for three weeks beginning May 19 when the New Westminster sawmill suspends operations.

Another 32 workers will be laid off in the market processing division.

Fred Harris, manager of both mills, said lumber demand and prices have declined sharply in recent weeks, with sales in the United States and Canada 50 per cent below normal.

Last bastion of enterprise

VANCOUVER (CP) — The taxi driver is the last bastion of free enterprise, Patrick Storey, a driver for MacLure's Cabs Ltd., told the B.C. Motor Carrier Commission Tuesday.

Storey was a witness on the second day of an inquiry set up to examine allegations that his company failed to provide responsive taxi services to the public from Vancouver International Airport. He said the driver is a commission salesman who must make the final decision on whether or not to proceed to the airport.

The main concern of the inquiry was with allegations that some MacLure's drivers refused to take passengers on short hauls, preferring the more lucrative downtown runs.

"I would say it was rare indeed for MacLure's drivers to refuse to pick up passengers," Storey said, "but I am not saying they don't do it."

MacLure's management regularly advises drivers not to refuse to pick up passengers, Storey said.

He testified that one of the big problems for drivers is that airlines do not provide up-to-date information on late arrivals of planes.

He suggested one improvement to service would be to erect an iron barrier in the taxi area so that passengers can be picked up on a first-come basis.

Robert Dunn, general manager of North Shore Taxi, admitted the airport taxi situation is not perfect and he recommended that there be a separate regulatory body to deal with airport cab service.

He also said taxi companies other than MacLure's should be permitted to legally pick up fares at the airport.

Top marks for UBC medicine

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Research breakthroughs and numerous international honors earned in the past year by University of B.C. professors are making it one of the top universities in North America, says university president Dr. Douglas Kenny.

The school's faculty of medicine is quietly building one of the best rosters of medical talent and teachers available anywhere, Kenny told about 200 persons at a College of New Caledonia banquet.

"Our province will soon have easily the best centre for multiple sclerosis in Canada, and perhaps the best in North America."

Kenny said that UBC, which received more than $26 million from all sources last year, the University of Toronto and McGill account for one-third of all federal research money awarded to Canadian universities.

And enrolment is a record 25,697 this year, he added, but the Universities Council of B.C. continues to set the university's annual operating grant well below the academic rate of inflation.

Meanwhile, Charles Connaghan announced he is resigning as UBC vice-president for administrative services effective July 1 to return to private business as head of a new consulting firm.

University board of governors have appointed James Kennedy, director of the UBC computer centre since 1966, to take over the post.

Bugging the innocent

If the MacDonald inquiry into RCMP doings and wrongdoings has accomplished anything at all, it has made clear that problems within the force have been almost entirely restricted to the Security Service.

The ordinary Mounties, providing normal policing services in eight provinces and investigating drug offences in all 10, have not been found committing arson, breaking and entering buildings, or playing "dirty tricks."

The Macdonald inquiry has focussed mainly on "illegalities" committed by Security Service members. A series of statistics made public last week by Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan suggest, however, that some of the Service's now legal activities should also be reviewed by politicians and the public.

The statistics are the summaries of police wiretapping and electronic bugging activities across Canada in 1979. They cover both bugs placed for investigation of suspected criminal activities (mainly by regular RCMP members and other provincial and municipal police forces) and those placed for "national security" reasons (mainly by the RCMP Security Service).

The total number of new warrants issued in suspected criminal cases was 764. Another 211 warrants were extended beyond their first term of 60 days. The average length of time a bug was in place was 72 days.

From those taps a total of 441 persons were charged — a success rate of almost 60 per cent.

Over-all, the record seems reasonable. The police taps appear to be hitting mainly persons engaged in criminal activities and perhaps their associates.

The case of the Security Service is quite different. It planted 299 bugs during the year, an average of one for each working day. The average length of time a bug was in place was 303 days, longer perhaps partly because the law does not limit the length of security bugs and wiretaps.

And the number of charges that resulted from those 90,000 days in which the RCMP was listening to conversations of suspected subversives? Why, absolutely none.

Most Canadians believe that the police should have the right to tap telephone lines and undertake other electronic surveillence to catch drug traffickers and other criminals. Most would surely extend that right for the apprehension of spies and saboteurs.

But most Canadians also believe that persons innocent of any offence and uninvolved with criminals or spies should retain the right to talk freely in their homes and on the telephone without being overheard by the RCMP. As Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen can attest, this isn't always done.

The statistics show that the Nielsen tap was perhaps not an aberration, that a not insignificant number of apparently innocent Canadians were placed under surveillence last year by the RCMP.

It is worth noting that all the Security Service taps were made without benefit of a judge's authority, because that is not a legal requirement in "national security" cases. Instead, the Solicitor-General himself gives the RCMP authority for the surveillence.

National security is exceedingly important to Canadians. Surely, however, our laws should ensure that national security includes the right not to be bugged and tapped by the RCMP when one is innocent of any crime.

Paying trustees

Education Minister Brian Smith made a long overdue move when he promised to increase the stipends paid to school trustees.

Smith said during the weekend that he plans to amend the Public Schools Act to allow trustees' salaries to exceed the $2,000-a-year level at which they have sat for more than a decade.

It has been inequitable to restrict school trustees' annual stipend while municipal mayors and aldermen are setting their own salaries. The result is that many aldermen are receiving $8,000 or more a year while school trustees working just as hard, in charge of a budget just as large and perhaps employing as large a staff, are receiving only one-quarter as much for their work.

Smith should not think, however, that the answer is to allow school trustees also to set their own salaries. That system too leads to problems.

It would be far better for Smith and Municipal Affairs Bill Vander Zalm to establish a formula for determining an appropriate salary for elected officials. Factors to be taken into consideration might include population of a region, assessment base, and geographical area.

A joint formula worked out between the education and municipal affairs ministries would probably prove to be fairer to both aldermen, school trustees — and to the public they represent.

The bad and the impossible

JERUSALEM — A week before the murder of five Jewish settlers in Hebron a former chief of Israeli military intelligence, Gen. Yehoshafat Harkabi, was talking about the situation in the occupied territories.

"We are losing control of the West Bank," he said. "Until now we managed with very few troops. Life went on. But now the settlers, the hotheads who break windows in Ramallah, have aroused them.

"I don't feel guilty toward the Palestinians — that we owe them something. They were so extreme. But I believe in reality. The reality is that Israel cannot control the West Bank forever. And the later it is, the worse it is for Israel. We have a choice not between the good and the bad but between the bad and the impossible. Staying in the West Bank is impossible."

Urgent choice

Terrorism has its own compulsions; it does not conform to the logic of peace. But the tragedy in Hebron underlines the urgency of the choice facing Israel in the occupied territories.

The government's immediate reaction was to expel the mayor of Hebron and two other local leaders, without a hearing and without any suggestion that they had had a part in the PLO terrorist operation. Officials said only that the three had recently made inflammatory comments.

That is one possibility for Israel: to get tough, to deport Palestinian critics, to impose curfews. Will such a policy bring tranquility to the West Bank? Hardly. Indeed, the experts here believe that one PLO purpose in the Hebron killings was to toughen Israeli occupation policy — and increase the hostility of the local population.

But Israel pays the main price of maintaining the occupation by a heavy hand: a price in army morale, in national unity, in spirit. So more and more Israelis feel — not romantics but realists, moved as Harkabi is by a sense of this country's self-interest. The strength of that feeling has been my most striking impression during a ten-day visit here.

"There can be absolutely no doubt in anyone's mind that the protracted Israeli occupation of the territories has had a negative effect on the morale of the armed forces ... There is a growing unwillingness to serve in typical 'occupying' roles, such as enforcing a curfew or fighting 16-year-old school girls who throw rocks ... New recruits (increasingly) either refuse to serve at all or demand that they not be sent to the territories."

Goodman was particularly critical of the policy of planting Jewish settlements in the West Bank, which he said raised security problems for Israel and alienated world opinion. It was not just oil but occupation practices, he said, that produced "growing support for the Palestinians and erosion in identification with Israel."

The Israeli journalists who regularly cover the West Bank express alarm about the consequences for Israel of continued occupation. For example, Yehuda Litani of the respected daily Haaretz wrote before Hebron that the PLO counted on Israeli settlements and tougher occupation policies to heighten tensions.

Litani said the behavior of some settlers, such as those who recently broke windows in houses and 120 cars in Ramallah, was "pushing the inhabitants of the areas toward more extremist solutions." He said government policy that "in fact promotes a 'greater Israel' through settlements" will push "both peoples towards total explosion."

The man who covers the West Bank for Israeli television is Rafik Halabi. Asked the other day about his feelings on the occupation, he said:

"Israel for me is a Jewish state, the only democracy in the area. If we want it to remain those things, we must leave. If I want to keep my Israel, I won't stay one more minute on the West Bank."

Path of terror

Four days before Hebron, in an editorial entitled "The Curse of Conquest," Haaretz warned against "the fatal flaw of rule by military occupation, where repression leads to terror, and terror to greater repression." It said: "The reality, which we have not changed — by means of words, settlements or legal reasoning — is that on the West Bank and in Gaza one nation is trying to rule another against its will."

No one should pretend that there is an easy way for Israel to leave the occupied territories while assuring its own security.

But the aim must be to leave, not to stay. A man no longer in the government put it with emotion: "For our own sake we must stop trying to rule these people."

Islanders' views

I was astounded to read recently a quote from Capital Regional Board Chairman Jim Campbell on the subject of inclusion of the Outer Gulf Islands in the Victoria Urban Transit Area. Campbell was quoted as saying he had been aware of the opinion of Salt Spring Islanders regarding the Transit Service Area, but he was not aware of the same views on other Islands.

I personally chaired a meeting on Pender Island, at which Mr. Campell was present, to protest the inclusion of Pender Island, the most populated of the outer Islands, in the Victoria Urban Transit area. He was told by the vast majority at this meeting we did not want to be included.

Approximately two months later he was informed that a vote had been taken on the Penders under the auspices of our local monthly paper, The Pender Post, where the vote showed 98 per cent against being included in the Victoria Transit Area.

On April 21 a petition, organized by Al Hillhouse, a public-minded citizen of Pender Island, containing a large number of names protesting the surcharge on Hydro bills and the inclusion of the Outer Islands in the Victoria Urban Transit Area, was delivered to Mr. Campell's office for his attention. Witnesses saw the petition received, but he made no mention of it at the April 23 meeting of the regional board.

Mr. Campbell has stated publicly that his election last fall as regional director gave him a mandate to bring the Outer Islands into the Transit Area. I challenge him on this interpretation. Because of a three-way fight he was elected on a minority vote, i.e. more voted against him than for him. That's no mandate to invoke unpopular policies.

Large groups on Galiano Island and Mayne Island are against their inclusion in this transit area.

I suggest Mr. Campbell call public meetings on the major islands of the Outer Islands group and find out the opinions of the people on this major issue. His election is not a mandate to put his own opinions into force but to find out his constituents' opinion and to put their views into force.

Mr. Campbell, include the Outer Islands out of the Victoria Urban Transit Area. — Gordon Wallace, Island Trustee, Pender Island, and Vice-Chairman, Islands Trust.

More on towing

Concerning the recent controversy over Gordon's Towing:

On Feb. 16, my car was towed away by them. I realize they have a job to do but a few of their procedures are less than acceptable.

For years there have been two parking lots, presumably owned by the Strathcona Hotel, where patrons could park for 50 cents all night. Much to my surprise the policy was changed and now parking is valid for two hours only. Granted, this was posted but not very conspicuously.

I noticed on the parking stub that the blank space between "valid for" and "hours" was indeed blank. Upon returning to find my vehicle gone, I would have been stranded had my companion not known where the vehicles were towed to. Nowhere did I see any sign displaying this information. After claiming my car for a $16 charge (cash only!), I examined my receipt and subsequently my car to find the bumper dragging on the pavement and Gordon's Towing denying any responsibility.

The receipt too was full of blanks. For instance: "Reported to (blank). Time (blank), Authorization to impound vehicle — (blank, no signature).

I'm all for a ticketing system: no more damaged vehicles, no more counting pennies to get your car back.

It can't be helping the tourist industry any. When Victorian residents are this upset, imagine how an out-of-towner must feel.

Also, it appears that the Strathcona Hotel doesn't want patrons to stay more than two hours. Odd, isn't it, there are hotels all over the city who offer free parking and plenty of it.

Suppose a person's funds are running low and the cost of a taxi to the impounding establishment cannot be afforded. A person must then walk. In today's day and age, many ladies go out unescorted. A long walk through an unreputable part of town would be a certain invitation to crime. — J. Wooden-Starkey, 4028 Carey Road.

Mail delays

I have read several testimonies about mail delays, and I am fed up with not reading any responses from the public affairs department of the Post Office. As an inside postal clerk in the Victoria mail processing plant, I am compelled to offer my testimony:

The mail service standards set by the post office catagorize letter mail into two standards of production: standard mail or non-standard mail. Standard mail comprises letters that are of the proper length, width, and no thicker than five mm (not much thicker than the width of three cents) — and, of course, an address that includes a postal code. Non-standard mail may have a first-class stamp on it, but if it does not conform to the aforesaid it is classified as non-machineable mail. Modern mechanized machinery rejects a majority of mail that is not of the proper width and size. Postal clerks (coders) are instructed to reject anyting that does not have a Canadian postal code.

What happens to all the so-called first-class mail that is rejected? All non-standard mail is sent to hand sort, which is a primary breakdown of mail. A high majority of postal clerks are "coders" and therefore they do not sort on the primary until all the standard mail is completed by the machinery. This poses the problem of delays, because hand-sorted mail is processed more slowly and is frequently caught-up in backlogs. So say good-bye to an effective international mail service.

There is no such thing as first-class mail anymore. If by chance the six page letter you write to a friend is too thick, it is rejected. Even postcards and the post offices' "change of address cards" are rejected because they are too thin for the letter sorting machine. The mechanization process of mail is not working to the capacity that the tax-paying customers assume.

Mail service is all too often unclear to the customer. It would help the public if there was a simple display of what is standard mail, at all wicket outlets.

If you are concerned over mail service standards, contact the public affairs office in your postal district, and ask them why modern processing methods do not permit attention to individual first-class mail, and why non-standard mail is referred to as "customer error." For your convenience I am mentioning the man to contact in B.C.: Mr. Buzz Sawyer, Acting Manager, Public Affairs, B.C. and Yukon Postal District, 608-349 West Georgia Street, Vancouver, B.C., phone 666-1821. — Roy R. Rickwood, 1753 Newton Street.

Petty behavior

The childish spectacle of Saanich municipality versus the Capital Regional District on the subject of a proposed shopping centre in the Tillicum neighbourhood of Saanich appears to have captured more public attention than any other local political issue in recent months.

So it should. Members of both elected bodies are expected to carry out their respective duties in a mature and responsible manner and to seek out reasonable solutions when contradictory points of view are expressed. The key participants have failed miserably in this regard.

Since its inception in 1965-66, the Capital Regional Board has witnessed many differences of opinion. Such is both healthy and predictable. However, the latest controversy, with accompanying temper tantrums and rigidity, is unparalleled.

As a taxpayer in Saanich and the CRD, I resent "paying both sides" in their race to court, incurring unnecessary legal costs and serving no constructive purpose.

I speak neither for nor against an enlarged Tillicum shopping centre at this time. However, I urge more reasonable members of the Saanich council and the CRD board to prevail upon Messrs. Campbell and Couvelier to abandon their present course of action and behave in the responsible manner we are all entitled to expect.

Some members of both public bodies have fallen victim to petty and vindictive behavior which could well provoke remedial action by the government of British Columbia at some time in the future. That, of course, would provoke cries of "heavy-handed interference" from the same participants who, through their recent actions, are inviting precisely that type of provincial response. — Hugh A. Curtis, MLA, Saanich and the Islands.

Forget the past

From this distance it is difficult to understand fully the situation in Quebec. It is primarily an emotional issue. It is a matter of heart rather than head. As such, the economic factors and logic are not nearly as important as otherwise might be the case. Likes and dislikes rather than financial gain are the criterion.

What people not born and raised in Quebec do not appreciate is that our French-Canadian friends do have legitimate complaints about their treatment years ago. The bad taste lingers on. They were largely excluded from the commercial life of their own province except for the lower-paid jobs and even there, because the bosses could not speak French, they were forced to learn another language. The truth is that the anglos of that day seemed unable to forget 1759 and there was a tendency among them to think of the francophones as second class citizens, something rightly to be resented.

For example, not until Premier Duplessis took power was it possible to have a French-Canadian appointed Quebec Minister of Finance.

What the French forget is that the trouble was largely of their own making. Education, which was entirely in the hands of their church, was largely classical in character. French-speaking engineers could not be had because there were no engineering courses given in that language. There was no such thing as studying business administration at the university level and their graduates were trained almost exclusively in preparation to become priests, physicians or lawyers. That has of course, all changed now and the whole field is wide open to all, with some fine examples of commercial leadership by those once excluded.

Understandingly there is a tendency for Rene Levesque's party to seek revenge (e.g. Bill 101) rather than justice but we can only hope that both sides will try to forget the past and join hands in making the 21st century Canada's. With Thomas D'Arcy McGee let us "hope to see the day when there will be no other term to our patriotism, but the common name of Canadian."

The fact is that there is no way any province can legally opt out of Canada unilaterally and it is a shame that Trudeau permitted the current referendum to be held. It would have been so easy to disallow the legislation which set it up and save all of us from the present battle which will get nowhere in the end. Finally, don't forget that both the Nova Scotia and B.C. legislatures have at one time voted to leave our union and we all know how far that got them. — F. L. P. Anderson, 409—2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Look in 'Soldier of Fortune' when you need a hired gun

By MOLLY IVINS
New York Times

BOULDER, Colo. — Robert K. Brown screeches around town in his red, four-wheel-drive Blazer, curses the "bleeding-heart liberals," fires exotic weapons at the rifle range and, most of all, puts out a magazine that has outraged liberals.

The magazine, Soldier of Fortune, bills itself as "the journal of professional adventurers." It contains a lot of adventure stories in the old style of True and Argosy and some solid information about guns, knives and fighting techniques. But what's causing the outrage is the magazine's classified ads section, which many people regard as information central for mercenary soldiers.

"Former merc," said one ad, "wants action high-risk dirty work. Expert small arms, automatic weapons, covert operations. Travel anywhere anytime."

Daniel Gearhart, the Vietnam veteran who was executed as a mercenary in Angola in July 1976, got his job by placing an ad in Soldier of Fortune. According to reporters who covered the recent war in Rhodesia, the majority of the 400 to 500 mercenaries fighting for the white minority government found their way there the same way.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., has asked the Justice Department to investigate the magazine for possible violations of the federal statutes that prohibit recruiting mercenaries or serving as one. But Brown says that he has been investigated repeatedly and that if he were recruiting, "I'd be in the slammer right now." He maintains that printing ads from people who say they are looking for dangerous work does not constitute recruiting.

He returned recently from one of his many trips to Rhodesia in recent years and announced, pleased as Punch, that he had finally gotten into a firefight. After consultation with his attorney on the law about serving as a mercenary, the following description of the incident was agreed upon: Brown was not in the uniform, pay nor employ of Rhodesia, nor was he fighting under the Rhodesian flag. As a journalist, he went out with a combat unit, found himself under attack and defended himself.

Brown does enjoy playing the role — he's always posing with rattlesnakes and guns, spitting tobacco and using language that would blister the paint off an outhouse — but it's not all a role: He was a good Golden Gloves boxer, he was in the Special Forces in Vietnam, he went into the Army Reserves and retired as a lieutenant colonel, he is considered a great shot and says he is mean as a cobra when angry.

He also has a master's degree in political science from the University of Colorado and he handles the king's English nicely. He has a mother who harasses him — "I saw your picture in the paper with that stupid green beanie," she once said to him, after he had appeared looking especially menacing in his green beret — and a daughter of whom he is proud. His friends say he has a sense of decency that would startle those who look upon him as a killer.

Robert Miller, a lawyer in Boulder, Colo., who has known Brown for 20 years, said: "Regardless of his stinking politics, he is 100 per cent honest. He has principles, and whether you think they're good, bad or indifferent, he never betrays them."

Brown is an anti-Communist who believes that the United States was right in Vietnam and that the black majorities in South Africa are incapable of governing. He says he is not a racist: Soldier of Fortune turns down ads from the Ku Klux Klan, the American Nazi Party and other racist groups, and it recently printed an admiring, even loving portrait of the late Albert N. Shepard Jr., a distinguished black American soldier.

Brown says he is proud of humanitarian work that he does. He is a member of the Parachute Medical Rescue Service and has a letter of commendation from the government of Guatemala for having parachuted supplies into the earthquake disaster area in February 1976. Soldier of Fortune once offered a $10,000 reward for anyone who would assassinate President Idi Amin of Uganda, which Brown counts as a similar humanitarian effort.

According to Brown, the warrior mentality is not a matter of a psychotic urge to kill, but a matter of wanting to prove oneself over and over. The men who read and write Soldier of Fortune seem to have a particular curiosity, a need to find out how they will react under fire. Brown cannot explain why.

Brown also said that of the magazine's 33,500 subscribers and its estimated 180,000 readers, "the vast majority are just Walter Mittys."

Scientists create a language for the dolphin

By WALTER SULLIVAN
New York Times

HONOLULU — In an attempt to create an artificial language that someday may allow dolphins and humans to talk to each other, experimenters from the University of Hawaii have taught two dolphins to carry out tasks in response to as many as 25 "words" arranged in varying sentences. One of the animals also audibly names objects in the artificial language.

The researchers believe that, for the first time, they have shown experimentally that the animals have the skills heretofore attributed to them only in fiction — that, for example, they can understand the abstract meanings of the words, since they respond correctly when the words are used in new combinations.

The research has features in common with attempts to teach sign language to chimpanzees. With such primates, however, because their auditory and vocalization capacities are more limited, the emphasis has been almost entirely on sign language rather than sound signals.

In the dolphin experiments one animal is being taught sonic, or acoustic, "words" that are generated in the water by computer and sound like warbles, squeaks and whistles. The other is learning the same words expressed by arm signals.

While in general the dolphins have proved to be slow learners of visual clues, they readily learn the arm gestures. In the limited visibility of their water environment they have evolved visual capabilities less than those for sound. The portion of the dolphin brain assumed to do auditory processing is extremely large.

The dolphin study is one of several under way in the Hawaiian Islands to learn more about the mental processes of these marine mammals, both in communication and social behavior. Researchers from the University of California at Santa Cruz are conducting daily observations of individual dolphin schools in the open sea, in Kealakekua Bay and elsewhere on the west coast of the island of Hawaii.

The language training project is being conducted at the Marine Mammal Research Laboratory of the University of Hawaii on the Honolulu waterfront. Dr. Louis Herman is its director, assisted by Dr. Douglas Richards, Dr. James Wolz and other researchers.

The project is using two female bottlenosed dolphins, which were captured in the Gulf of Mexico two years ago. One, named Akeakamai (Hawaiian for "lover of wisdom"), has learned 25 arm-gesture "words," as well as some acoustic words. The other, Phoenix, is being taught primarily acoustic words. Akeakamai has also learned to emulate some of the computer-generated sounds, and has been able to "name" some of the objects used in the tests, such as a ball, plastic hoop or piece of plastic pipe.

According to Herman this effort, if successful, "may provide a means for achieving some degree of two-way communication between dolphin and human within an artificial language." Such communication has never before been achieved by man and another species. He added that the difficulties will be "formidable."

BOTTLENOSE DOLPHIN
. . .smarter than we think?

Initially, in teaching the names of the test objects, which also included Frisbees and oddly shaped hoops, the object was placed on the water surface while the word for it was given either acoustically or optically. The dolphin had to touch the object with its nose. A special acoustic signal said "yes" (for a correct response) or "no." The dolphin was rewarded with a fish for a correct response.

The dolphins proved somewhat short-tempered and the use of "no" was largely dropped. If one of them makes two errors in a row, it may raise its head from the water and squeal in anger. It may even throw the ball or Frisbee — with bull's-eye accuracy — at the trainer's head. The dolphins are not punished physically; if they misbehave the trainer turns his or her back on the animal. They seem to relish praise — hand-clapping and pats on the head by the trainer.

A typical command is a four-word sentence such as: "Phoenix-Ball-Fetch-Gate." This tells Phoenix to carry the ball to the gate between two parts of the pool. One dolphin has learned to discriminate right from left. If told, for example, "Fetch-Left-Pipe" when two pipes are visible, it knows which one to get.

"Hoop-Through" means swim through the hoop. When, on a whim, the command "Person-Through" (a new term to the dolphins) was given, a dolphin pushed one of the researchers, Gordon Bauer through the gate. This appeared to show that the dolphin understood the generalized meaning of "through." Bauer, a doctoral candidate, normally punches the commands into a keyboard on a tower overlooking the pool for rapid acoustic delivery into the water under computer control.

The project has been aided by the remarkable capacity of dolphins for mimicry. In other pools they have been seen trying to clean algae from a tank window with a bird feather, emitting sounds like those of the air regulator of the diver who normally did the job.

One of his goals, Herman said, is to understand better the roots of human language: whether it evolved from more primitive non-verbal processes and whether the capacity for such communication is unique to man. The studies, he believes, may also help show how children learn language and how it can more effectively be taught to those with speaking difficulties.

He also hopes to learn to what extent animals with greater sonic capabilities than man have a potential for language learning.

Dr. Kenneth Norris, director of the University of California studies, said that despite years of recording the elaborate and highly varied underwater sounds of dolphins, almost nothing is known of their significance except for the sharp clicks used for echo-ranging, a technique they use to hunt down fish or look out for predators, such as sharks. These clicks, which sound to the human ear like a rusty hinge, may be emitted 700 times a second and can reach frequencies 12 times higher than those audible to man.

The highly developed sound-processing section of the dolphin brain appears to play a role other than mere echo-ranging, for the bat, with a comparable sonar capability, has a relatively small brain.

"In an ocean full of dullards, what good is such a brain?" Norris asked. "Certainly complicated nervous machinery is not needed for concourse with jellyfish, sea cucumbers and sponges. Some of its capacity clearly relates to catching prey (including co-ordinated herding and attack), but there is clearly more than that involved."

The dolphin sonar is apparently capable of "seeing" into objects, determining their softness, shape, size and distance. From the return echo, for example, a dolphin can discriminate a sheet of aluminum from a sheet of copper when both are painted the same color. Norris believes these acoustic capabilities may, in effect, represent two senses, much like taste and smell in human beings. High-frequency sounds seem to be processed in a different part of the dolphin brain from lower-frequency sounds, such as whistles.

"It is very hard for us to imagine sensory systems and processes we do not have," he said. "It's a bit like a man from outer space tapping into the Bell System centre and trying to make sense of all the beeps and switching sounds."

To observe dolphin social behavior firsthand, one of the California students, Jody Solow, swims each day with a school of dolphins that comes into one of the bays. Clay Clifton, a wildlife specialist, mans a rubber boat and watches for sharks while she swims.

In her first encounter with a school of 10 dolphins off the nearby island of Lanai she tried in vain to elicit their interest by somersaults and other underwater acrobatics. As they turned away she was so disappointed that, muffled by her snorkeling gear, she emitted a shrill throat sound "like a dog's yawn."

Immediately one of the retreating dolphins — apparently the dominant male — turned and swam close to her. From then on, she announced her arrival each day with this sound and the leader led the school to within inches of her. On one occasion they joined with her in a game of "soccer" using a fragment of black plastic cloth found on the sea floor.

Her hope is to be accepted into a group as Jane Goodall, a researcher in Africa, did with chimpanzees. She has not yet established a close relationship with the school now under study, possibly because of its size, numbering some 200, and its varying composition. .

Further research on dolphin sounds, as well as training for special missions, is being conducted here by the United States Navy, which, in seeking to track submarines at great distances, is concerned with all sources of sound in the sea.

Dolphins and their close relatives, porpoises, are descended from land mammals that returned to the sea some 50 million years ago. The "dolphin" served in sea food restaurants is a fish.

Recession won't be as bad as 30s: economist

By KEN SMITH
CP Business Editor

TORONTO (CP) — The Western world is in or moving into an economic recession, but the impact will not be as severe as the turndown of the middle 1970s, a United States economist forecast Tuesday.

R. L. Slighton, director of international economic forecasting for the Chase Manhattan Bank of New York, told the Conference Board in Canada's annual financial meeting that the recession will likely hit harder in North America than in Europe or Japan.

Other economists said that, with Canada's high degree of dependence on international markets for its own wellbeing, the Canadian scene will likely be a copy of the picture in other western countries.

Slighton said the world recession will likely be more severe in the United States than elsewhere.

Many economists were predicting a drop in output of two per cent, with the recession lasting for nine months, although he expected a decline of up to 3.5 per cent lasting for 12 months.

Such a recession would be lighter than the economic drop experienced in the middle 1970s, when activity slowed by nearly six per cent.

While growth is expected to slow or decline in Europe, the outlook there is less discouraging, Slighton said.

Any falloff in economic activity would be smaller and finish more quickly than it will in North America.

Slighton said Japan's economy will likely continue to grow while North America's and Europe's retreat, but expansion will slow to about three per cent a year from more than six per cent in 1979.

He also predicted that the western world's recovery from economic problems will not be as sudden or dramatic as it was in 1975 when the world pulled sharply out of recession.

Governments had learned from the last recession that too-rapid expansion creates distortions and problems. In addition, uncertainties about the world's political situation will make governments and businessmen cautious about planning expansion.

Thomas Maxwell, the board's chief economist, said the U.S. economy is dominating the Canadian outlook, especially weaknesses in the auto and housing markets, high inflation and monetary policy.

"While all categories of exports will be affected to some extent by the slowdown in the U.S. economy, those most affected will be automobiles and lumber."

Canada's auto exports were off 13.7 per cent last year, reflecting the softer U.S. market, and will decline another 14.5 per cent this year before starting to recover in the last quarter.

CanCel board for taking BCRIC offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — The board of directors of Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. has recommended that the company's shareholders accept the $15 a share offer from B.C. Resources Investment Corp.

In a circular to shareholders Monday, Canadian Cellulose said it considered the offer price to be fair and reasonable.

Canadian Cellulose was trading at $14.75 Tuesday on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

The offer to purchase all the publicly-held shares of Canadian Cellulose will cost the corporation $36 million. BCRIC already owns 81 per cent of Canadian Cellulose's shares.

Some analysts had criticized the offer as being about $3 million too high. When the offer was made April 20, Canadian Cellulose was trading at just over $10.

The offer is conditional on the corporation obtaining 90 per cent of the outstanding shares.

They were the bad old days, says poet

By AL FORREST

Canadian writing at last is being recognized as real literature — which is great for the present generation but a shame for authors who came of age earlier in the century, says poet Earle Birney.

"Some talented writers have never received the fame they deserved."

Birney, 75, said he is satisfied with his reception abroad but there are many Canadian writers who are in the overlooked generation.

Prominent among these, he said, is Hugh MacLennan who never got the recognition he deserved because he was a Canadian writer at the wrong time.

"The right time is now," he said.

"Writers like Margaret Atwood have a relatively easy time of it because Canadian writing now is accepted as genuine literature.

"I'm not trying to put Margaret Atwood down in any way. But her rise is incredibly fast, mainly due to changing conditions," he said.

The fact she wrote on women's issues at a time when it became fashionable also was a fortunate chance.

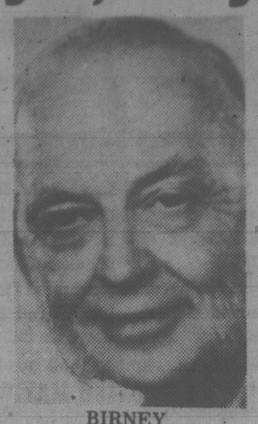
Birney concedes that luck can play a significant role in early acceptance of any writer.

For example in his own career he had a poem called The Bear on the Delhi Road published in the New Yorker.

"Everyone assumed it was great because the New Yorker published it. It was immediately collected into anthologies and was the title of a collection of my poems published in England.

"Now, wherever I go, I must read The Bear on the Delhi Road because it is so well known. Also it it short and that's important at a reading."

David, a poem about a mountain accident, a favorite with student audiences, takes 15 minutes to read and he no longer includes it in his readings, except in special classroom situations.



BIRNEY
. . . time for summing up

Birney is optimistic about the future of literature.

"As long as there are human beings there will be poetry of one form or another."

Birney does not have any plans for further books of poetry, although he occasionally writes a poem and sends it off to a magazine for publication.

At his age — he will be 76 on Tuesday — he says he's more in a mood for summing up.

He has four or five books in the works, all of which may be published within the next 18 months.

About ready to go to print is Conversations with Trotsky, an account of an interview with the Russian Communist leader shortly before his assassination in Mexico.

The book also contains a number of Birney's political essays of the period.

"I was an active Marxist in the thirties," he says.

"I wasn't a Marxist before that and I stopped being a Marxist later, but I was active in politics during those years. This book will reflect the historical setting of the 1930s."

Another book will be Dylan Thomas and Malcolm Lowry in Vancouver, a series of essays on non-Canadian writers he has known.

Lowry lived in Vancouver from 1939 to 1954 but is not regarded as a Canadian writer, Birney said.

Radio talks on Canadian literature will be collected in two volumes to be called Spreading Time, a veiled reference to what farmers spread on their land to make the crops grow.

Also in the works is a collection of his radio plays and an autobiography on his childhood in the Creston Valley.

Despite the early excitement over Conversations with Trotsky, Birney's not sure whether there's a best-seller in the carload — but he's not too concerned about that.

"Some of this material is of significant historical interest and it's pleasant work."

B.C. to help fund solar heat testing

A $5,000 provincial government fund has been established to assist companies manufacturing solar heating equipment to have their products performance-tested.

The National Research Council already covers the cost of transporting solar equipment to Canada's only testing facility in Toronto, plus half the testing fee. The B.C. government now is offering to pay the other half out of the fund.

"We want to ensure that the B.C. solar industry can produce quality products competitively priced," Energy Minister Bob McClelland said today.

He also reported that more than 550 applications have been received for his ministry's recently-announced pilot project to install solar hot water preheating system in selected B.C. homes.

Bids are expected shortly from B.C. suppliers of solar collectors and the next stage is a draw of names to choose the 100 homeowners who will participate in the shared-cost program.

Students dress rule explained

Incoming Oak Bay high school principal Keith Bickmore said today a meeting he had Tuesday with representatives of Grade 10 students at the school appears to have settled a simmering dispute.

Students staged a brief walkout on Monday to protest rumored plans to scrap the semester system, replacing it with a full-year system of classes, and suggestions of tougher dress restrictions.

Bickmore said the students he talked to were convinced of the need to eventually drop the semester system, after they heard why he was considering the change.

The student representatives plan to take the matter back to their classmates for further consideration.

Bickmore, now principal of Esquimalt high school, said the main reason the semester system must be dropped is that the provincial education ministry has called for an over-all increase in English instruction.

With the semester system each student has a study period in one semester which would be abolished to provide more instruction time in the full-year system.

"The students I talked to were very reasonable and understanding. I think the major problem was one of communication."

On the matter of dress restrictions, Bickmore said, communication again was the problem.

He said he had told students he wasn't prepared to see them dressed in T-shirts with slogans that were "obscene or unacceptable in polite society."

Security gates studied

Government liquor officials are considering ways to beef up security at the James Bay liquor outlet at 230 Menzies.

The store has been hit by five break-ins and attempted break-ins in the past three weeks, the most recent overnight.

Jack Brown, manager of the distribution branch, said he has approached the security division in Vancouver seeking a solution.

One of the options, he said, is to put gates on the mall, similar to those on Nootka Court, to prevent people from walking through after hours.

Brown would not reveal how much liquor was taken in the break-ins but police indicate the losses were small.

The latest incident was only an attempt — a window was smashed and the culprit fled.

Police are concerned about the vulnerability.

"The outlet was put in without any thought to security. It should never have been put where it is," a spokesman said.

Dogs kill cats at shelter

Shawnigan Lake RCMP believe a number of cats found dead in the Good Shepherd Shelter over the weekend were killed by dogs that broke loose from their pens.

A police spokesman said today the deaths were not due to anyone breaking in, as shelter staff first believed.

"We're chalking up the deaths as accidental," the spokesman said.

Seven dead kittens and one adult cat were found in the shelter's isolation room above the main office early Sunday morning.

A number of other cats and one of four dogs that had escaped from pens in the room were burned around the mouth.

Sister Julia, operator of the shelter, blamed the deaths on someone breaking into the place overnight Saturday and felt the person had attacked the cats with a knife and thrown acid on the burned animals.

But Mill Bay veterinarian Dr. Christine Forbes said the wounds on the animals were consistent with attacks by dogs and the acid turned out to be a bottle of disinfectant that had been knocked from a small table in the room, presumably by one of the dogs.

Forbes said one of the cats that was burned had to be destroyed this morning but the rest are recovering.

Meanwhile Victoria SPCA manager Jospeh Heald said today his officials will continue to monitor the shelter, operated since 1966 as a home for unwanted animals.

At present there are about 400 cats and dogs on the 58-acre property about three kilometres south of Mill Bay.

Heald said last month SPCA inspectors carried out an inspection of the facility and found the animals were receiving adequate food, water and shelter.

However, he said, he is disturbed by reports of an acute staff shortage.

Sister Julia said Tuesday that 18 of her staff of 23 have quit in recent weeks apparently over a disagreement with the way the shelter is being run.

Ferry bus improvements urged

Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson says bus service to the Swartz Bay ferry terminal should be redesigned to meet the real needs of the travelling public.

"If buses were scheduled from various locations in the Greater Victoria area to meet the ferry it would result in significantly reduced traffic congestion at the terminal, Hanson said Tuesday.

He suggested a pilot project be put in place on weekends to provide bus service to the ferries from Colwood Corners, Oak Bay village and other convenient locations.

"If such an experimental service were properly advertised and run with a scheduled reservation system, I believe more people would find it advantageous to use a people-oriented bus service for short trips to Vancouver," Hanson stated.

He also pointed out the present system of dropping off foot passengers and their baggage at the ferry terminal is not convenient especially for senior citizens because of the long walk on the ramps to get on the ferry.

"I would like to see the buses unload right at the vessel. It would encourage more people to go as foot passengers."

Parents reporting on immersion plan

Parents of students attending Willows elementary will report at 8 tonight on their plan to keep alive the school's French immersion program.

A committee of parents was struck to look into the problem of overcrowding at Willows and a suggestion that students in Grades 1 to 3 of the French program be moved to Oaklands.

The committee is expected to recommend that all students enrolled at Willows continue to attend either the French or English programs they are in.

Maximum enrolment in the French program should be set at 200 pupils and enrolment in the English program set at 455.

If the enrolment limits are exceeded, the committee suggests, it should consider the matter further.

Parents opposed the Greater Victoria School Board's plan to move the first three grades of the French program to Oaklands claiming it would weaken the program.

Tonight's meeting will be at the school.

Improper training hobbles 2,000 Vancouver joggers

Clement said that an estimated 2,000 joggers in the Vancouver area alone have suffered injuries severe enough to prevent them from ever running again.

A detailed study on these runners, all patients who have visited the Terra Nova Sports Medicine Clinic in nearby Richmond within the last two years, is expected soon.

Clement said joggers should learn how to run properly with instruction from a fitness expert or through a number of excellent books on the market. Twelve major magazines and journals on the subject are published in North America.

He prescribes continuous, vigorous exercise as the best medicine for staying young.

He told about 500 members of the College of Family Physicians that regular physical activity can delay the aging processes and keep a body eight or nine years younger.

However, people who have had little or no exercise require fitness tests to evaluate physical capacity, strength and flexibility so programs can be specially designed for them.

The best place for most people to start is a community recreation centre or a university gymnasium.

"Too many people start off with too much, too soon. People believe exercise has to be stressful to be good. But it has to be enjoyable."

Clement, a former Olympic athlete, has served as medical consultant to the Commonwealth Games, the Pan-American Games and the Canadian Olympic team in the 1976 Montreal Games.

There are about 30 million joggers in North America and the jogging explosion is not about to fade.

"In running, there are no restrictions on climate or space. There are too many advantages. Low cost; for example."

The major expense is in shoes and Clement said joggers should not scrimp when they choose them.

"I don't think you can get an adequate shoe for less than $30 to $50. If you know the shoe you want, you might be able to pick it up on sale for less at a non-specialist shoe store (a department store)."

Shoes should not be snug because the foot will increase about one-half a size as blood circulation in the foot increases during running.

Women face the problem of finding a comfortable brassiere.

"The biggest single problem women runners have is that brassieres generally tend to be abrasive."

He said women sometimes tuck tissue paper into the areas where buckles or seams might rub against the skin.

Williams to probe privacy breach

Attorney-General Allan Williams told the legislature Tuesday he will investigate a report that his ministry breached the confidentiality of an MLA's correspondence.

NDP MLA Stuart Leggatt (Coquitlam-Moody) asked about a letter written by Robert Kerr of Chilliwack to his MLA, Socred Harvey Schroeder, last June.

In it, Kerr — an employee of the provincial corrections branch — registered complaints about the Chilliwack forest camp operation.

Leggatt said the letter was forwarded by the MLA to the attorney-general but eventually wound up on the desk of Kerr's supervisor.

Kerr was called on the carpet to explain why he had written that sort of letter.

Williams said he is reviewing the Kerr incident and others of a similar nature.

He also assured the house that Kerr will not be disciplined for exercising his democratic right by complaining to his MLA.

Before the judge

A guilt-ridden 20-year-old who returned to Victoria from Edmonton to face a breach of probation charge was jailed 10 days Tuesday after pleading guilty in provincial court.

Franciscus Johan Smit's conscience had been bothering him, Judge Harold Alder was told by duty legal aid lawyer Joy Allington.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Smit had been sentenced by Alder last June 25 to a six-day, intermittent jail term for driving while under suspension.

Mulligan said Smit not only failed to report to his probation officer as directed but also failed to show up at Wilkinson Road jail to serve his weekend sentence.

Allington said Smit went directly to Edmonton where he stayed for 10 months and worked.

Judge Lorne Pearce handed out a suspended sentence, nine months probation, and 50 hours of community service work to a 20-year-old Port Alberni man who pleaded guilty to possession of hashish.

Robin Jay Fraser was originally charged with possession of hashish for the purpose of trafficking but pleaded guilty to the lesser included offence of simple possession.

Fraser threw a baggie into some pampas grass, Pearlman stated. Officers retrieved it and found 12 foils of hashish as well as three small vials of the narcotic.

Michael John Kelly, 19, of 370 Obed, found guilty of dangerous driving, was given a suspended sentence and six months probation by Pearce.

Kelly was driving about midnight Nov. 12 near Obed and Orillia where Saanich police were conducting another investigation and were taking a person into custody. Kelly came over a hill at an estimated 80 km/h and narrowly missed an officer and two police cars before going on to a boulevard and back on the road.

Kelly parked his vehicle two or three blocks from his residence where police found it five minutes later. Kelly went to the Saanich police station a few hours later and admitted being the driver.

Alder imposed a 10-day, intermittent term on a 30-year-old man who pleaded guilty to his third conviction for driving while under suspension.

Gary Arnold Easter, 861 Admirals, was involved in a single-car mishap while making a left turn in the 600-block Admirals about 7:45 p.m. Feb. 7. There was extensive damage to Easter's car and $1,000 damage to a power pole.

Tillicum settlement bid

Justice J.G. Ruttan of the B.C. Supreme Court adjourned to Friday the Tillicum shopping centre case to give lawyers time to attempt an agreement.

The adjournment came Tuesday after developer Cal Investments Ltd. lawyer Brian Wallace argued in favor of dropping an injunction preventing the company from adding 200,00 square feet to the centre.

The Capital Region District was granted an injunction last week after Saanich approved lifting a restrictive covenant to make the expansion possible.

Ruttan on Monday decided Cal Investments could join Saanich in opposing the injunction.

The regional district says enlarging the size of the 295,000-square-foot shopping centre breaches the regional plan and violates an agreement Saanich made with the regional board last summer.

However, Wallace and lawyer Rodney Taylor told the judge the written agreement between Saanich and the regional board does not mention the restrictive covenant.

The resolution states only that Saanich will refer all shopping centres requiring rezoning to the regional district, Wallace said.

He said Tillicum is already zoned and is legally entitled to an expansion far greater than the one it is seeking.

Wallace has also requested the CRD pay any damages awarded by the court in this case.

UVic servicing money sought from province

Saanich council is again trying to get money from the provincial government for services it provides the University of Victoria.

Municipal staff is preparing a report on costs of servicing UVic that will be sent to the government.

The assessed value of university property in Saanich was $15.2 million in 1978, or about six per cent of the municipality's taxable assessment that year.

Free parking may go

Saanich council is contemplating making employees pay for parking.

Mayor Mel Couvelier told the budget committee this week employees earn good wages and parking privileges are a hidden benefit.

Couvelier said he is concerned about the principle of providing free parking and commented that charging parking fees might encourage people to use public transit.

He also suggested towing away employees parked in public parking areas.

Ald. Irene Block said there is no free parking at the University of Victoria where she works.

If university employees can pay, so can municipal staff, she added.

Council rejected a recommentation from municipal administrator William Tremayne that $4,000 be added to the budget to create more parking spaces.

A spokesman for municipal staff said employees are overwhelmingly opposed to the idea of paying for parking.

Speed blamed in death

A coroner's jury Tuesday night found excessive speed was the cause of a single-vehicle accident Jan. 2 that killed a 17-year-old Saanich girl.

The jury said Philip Mimms, 19, of 3385 Whittier, was going too fast and lost control of his jeep on a curve at McKenzie near Oakwinds.

Kathleen Ann Cameron, 2224 Edgelow, died in the 1:30 a.m. mishap from a broken neck and other injuries.

Evidence at the inquest showed the girl was sitting on the lap of her boyfriend, Steve de Girolamo, 21, of 4014 Cedarwood, in the front passenger seat.

She was thrown out of the vehicle and struck a lamp standard.

Relief extended

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — India's northern Bihar state has been authorized to spend $30 million for disaster relief to about 43 million people affected by a severe drought caused by poor monsoon rains last year.

Alderman just wanted to help but got caught in squeeze

It seemed like a good idea after the Halloween ruckus to inform Sidney youths of their rights . . . the RCMP didn't see it that way at all.

By PAUL MINVIELLE

When Ben Ethier first thought about telling the young people of Sidney and North Saanich their rights under the law he never dreamed the local RCMP and the town council would react the way they did.

The Sidney alderman says he only wanted to render a service to his town and no one questions Ethier's sincerity.

His idea — and subsequent dilemma — had its roots in an incident last Halloween when a crowd of about 200 young people armed with eggs, rocks and bottles, tried to storm the Sidney RCMP detachment.

Extra officers and a dog from Colwood were not needed in the end. No one was injured and property damage was minimal. The incident saw 24 youths arrested.

Police were praised for their performance.

"But Halloween came as a surprise," Ethier said, adding some of his fellow citizens were as shaken as he at the apparent anti-police sentiment among the town's young people.

Mayor Norma Sealey said at the time that to her the crowd seemed angry at everyone, not just police.

Ethier decided to find out what the problem was.

With the cooperation of the two local weekly newspapers, he set up his own phone as a hot line, asking young people to call him about their problems.

He got 27 calls, four from parents and while he won't divulge details, he says some stories astounded him.

Around the end of February, Ethier gave Peggy Rowand of the Sidney Review and Peter Menzies of the Peninsula Free Press a preliminary draft of his findings, emphasizing its rough state.

Ethier says he was amazed when a Review editorial a short time later criticized him because the report was poorly written and challenged his findings.

A Review staffer apparently suggested Ethier should share his knowledge with council or the police commission.

The Review didn't run a story on Ethier's report and the editor regretted Ethier's decision not to follow the staffer's advice.

Ethier was stung.

"I thought it was up to them to polish that sort of thing," he said.

"I'm not an editor. Did I have to put it into shape for them?"

After researching people's rights under Canadian law, Ethier wrote a 12-page essay and gave it to Sidney lawyer Jim Robertson to check.

With Robertson's seal of approval, Ethier decided to go ahead.

Spurning the Review, he handed the essay to the Free Press and the first two instalments appeared April 2 and 9.

After the first article appeared, Ethier arrived home from his job as a B.C. Ferries engineer to find a notice of a special meeting of council.

"I thought it was something about property or personnel or whatever."

It turned out to be a special meeting of council called solely to deal with Ethier's journalistic jaunt.

Present was Sgt. Bob Hobson of the Sidney RCMP.

"It was an inquisition. I should have walked out," Ethier said.

"I just was unprepared for it. After we started I asked them to record the meeting."

There were differing accounts of the closed session in the two weeklies but the message was straightforward enough: Sidney RCMP were unhappy with the articles on the grounds they would make policing more difficult.

It was suggested more officers would be needed if the articles continued.

Hobson said the articles were inaccurate and questioned Ethier's competency to write about as complex a subject as law.

He said interpretations of various statutes change almost daily in the courts and suggested it is impossible to tell people about their rights through newspaper stories.

Mayor Sealey and council agreed, suggesting many young people would read only parts of the articles, leading to misunderstanding.

Worst of all — and this seemed most damaging when it first came out — on the day the first article appeared a 17-year-old motorcycle rider told an RCMP officer he didn't have a driver's licence.

The officer said the youth refused to give his name and address, claiming he didn't have to.

The youth ended up being charged with five separate offences, including obstructing a policeman.

Police promptly linked the incident to the publication of the first article.

Coincidentally, Robertson, the lawyer who first okayed the articles for Ethier, is representing the youth in the case.

"My client has permitted me to say that he never even read the article," Robertson said.

The Free Press's Menzies said the only reason he didn't run an article the week after Ethier asked him to stop was that he didn't have room, adding: "There are things in those articles that can benefit a lot of people, not just young people."

If Ethier withdraws the articles, Menzies said he will arrange to have a similar series done by someone else.

Robertson sticks by his endorsement of the articles.

Indeed, Robertson told Ethier to send anyone with any concern about the articles to him.

So what prompted such a strong reaction?

It's difficult to understand why police would object to any article that contains this sort of advice:

"Remember: If you speak to a police officer quietly and respectfully — as someone doing a difficult and responsible job — you are much more likely to be treated with respect in turn. Police officers have problems too."

But police point to inaccuracies in the two articles, such as Ethier's reference to a "Bail Justice of the Peace."

Robertson conceded there's no such title within the Canadian judicial system but he dismisses that criticism as nitpicking.

At one point Ethier suggests: "If you are the driver — not a passenger — of an automobile you must always produce a driver's licence or other proof of identity when requested."

One police officer said the implication a passenger in a car is not required to identify himself is "a crock."

Ethier's article spells out the conditions under which a person must identify himself and being in a car doesn't mean you must.

Although Ethier suggests a person is not required to carry or produce identification of any kind — the exceptions are noted — he also suggests that cooperating with a policeman by telling him your name and address often ends the questioning.

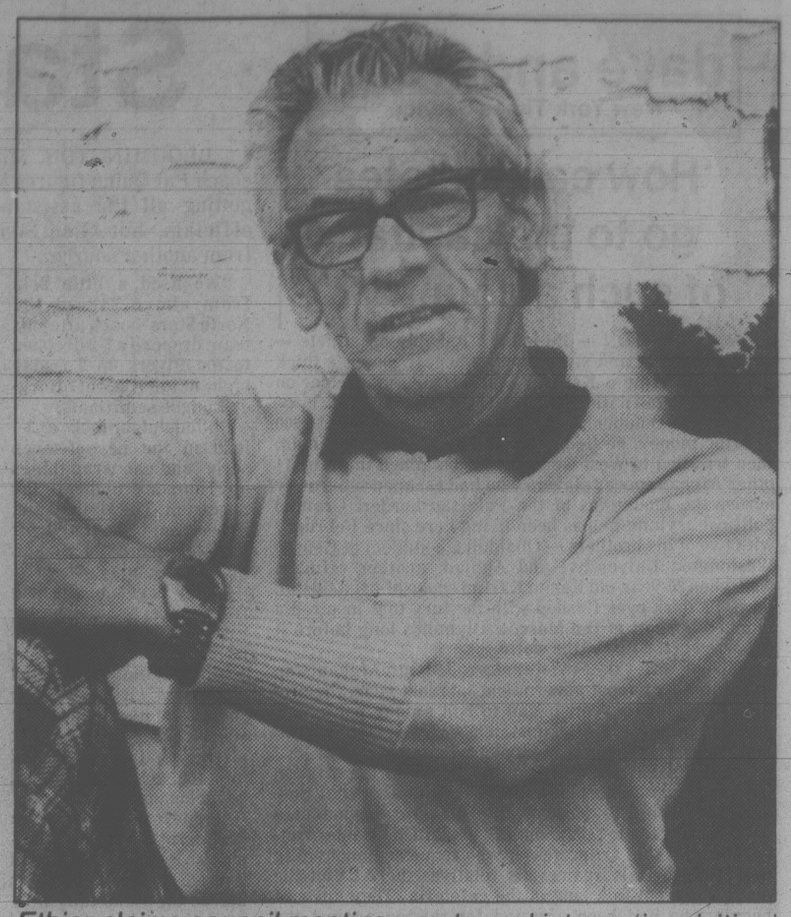
Despite Ethier's seemingly reasoned approach, Hobson remains convinced the matter would best be left out of newspapers, suggesting there are other ways to let people know their rights, such as school programs.

And if you think your rights have been violated?

"You always have the right to complain," Hobson said, suggesting procedures to register complaints are available to everyone.

Ethier agrees the concerns of the RCMP must be considered since it's the police we trust to maintain law and order.

But he wonders: Is the law so complex that certain basic rights can't be simply stated and communicated in a series of newspaper articles?



Ethier claims council meeting was turned into an 'inquisition'

Redevelopment proposed for Fort, Quadra

The controversial corner of Fort and Quadra may soon be redeveloped, after a decade behind blue plywood hoarding.

Eleven years ago developer George Mulek of Vancouver erected a 19-storey apartment block at 921 View but city council blocked plans for a second 21-storey tower on the Fort Street frontage after public protests about the first building.

Council wouldn't issue a building permit and rezoned the area.

Mulek retaliated by boarding up the remaining piece of property and stalling on finishing some of the details on the first unit.

But in the last year there has been some movement. Last August, council asked its Advisory Planning Commission to review the site for possible further rezoning. And Mulek reportedly met Mayor Bill Tindall in March and was told city council is willing to compromise.

Recently Mulek forwarded a development proposal to city hall. A conceptual drawing shows a 12-storey apartment block, believed to contain retail stores or offices on the main floor. The APC is examining the plans and may make a counter proposal to Mulek, according to one source.

The main problem apparently involves the floor space ratio. The present zoning dictates a ratio of just over three — meaning a developer can put up a building with floor space three times the square footage of the entire property.

This would allow very little further construction on the site as the View tower fills most of the floor space allowed on that parcel.

Campers get warning as fire hazard mounts

A long-range forecast for dry weather is expected to increase rapidly the existing moderate fire hazard on southern Vancouver Island, a spokesman for B.C. Forest Service said today.

While hot dry weather has created a severe fire risk in the interior of B.C., only a handful of minor blazes have been reported here.

But the spokesman said rangers are expecting the situation here to become more dangerous and warned hikers, campers and residents to be careful with matches and sparks from fires.

"The longer-range forecast suggests we should have quite a drying trend," he said.

But there is no ban on campfires yet.

Two fires at Langford Tuesday were quickly controlled and the RCMP are investigating.

Minor fires at Otter Point and Shawnigan Lake also were brought under control.

A drying trend has started in the Campbell River area and the fire danger is increasing rapidly on the north island.

The spokesmen said forest rangers are keeping a close watch.

Unusually mild temperatures and a minimal amount of snowfall at higher elevations this year are the reasons for the increased fire risk in most parts of the province.

And protection officials report no immediate relief in sight as drought conditions continue through most areas of the province.

Hardest hit is Prince George, with more than 100 fires burning, including about six major blazes of 1,000 or more acres.

There are 260 firefighters, 12 helicopters and four planes in the region fighting the fires, which have caused an estimated $199,000 damage.

The problem is also serious in the Cariboo, with 57 new fires reported since the beginning of May and 85 fires still burning. Damage has been estimated at $305,000.

A total of 121 new fires have been reported around the province, bringing this year's total to 303, an increase of more than 60 per cent over the same period last year.

Total damages from fires so far this year is $723,600, compared to $83,121 the same time last year.

Danger ratings are high in the central and northern interior and in the Peace River area the danger rating has also become extreme.

In the Vancouver region six new fires were reported recently and four are still burning.

The Salvation Army is more than half way to its goal of collecting $250,000 in this year's Red Shield Appeal.

Capt. Bill Merritt, campaign director, says the door-to-door canvass Monday night has reaped $80,000 so far and donations are still coming in.

He said it is too early to tell if the campaign is running ahead of last year's pace.

Businesses, their employees and professionals will be canvassed during the next two weeks.

More foot patrols 'Band-aid solution' - chief

Stepped-up police patrols were promised Tuesday for parts of downtown Victoria where drunks and panhandlers congregate and initimidate the tourists."

But Chief William Snowdon said this is only a Band-aid solution to deep-rooted social problems which law enforcement alone can't handle. If police don't get co-operation from other agencies it will ultimately fail.

"I don't have a magic wand. It's a social problem," Snowdon told a meeting of downtown businessmen at city hall called by Ald. Ron McKenzie.

"We happen to live in the most beautiful city in Canada and we tell everybody to come here. Some of them smell bad and they don't believe in working. Some of them have big dogs. They're going to sit on the park benches. The problem of the transient tourist who looks bad and acts bad is here to stay," he said.

Snowdon said there was a day when police could tell someone to "move along" and he did. No longer.

"Young people know the law. They know their rights. He is likely to tell the officer what he can do with his advice.

"We are spawning a new society," the chief said. "The kind of things we're doing here are Band-aids."

Snowdon said the community has to explore other ways of dealing with the phenomenon.

The Boys and Girls Clubs of Victoria have suggested teaming a policeman with a social worker and if funds for the second half of the team can be found "we're willing to look at it."

He admitted there is some value in having police patrol the so-called trouble areas — the Causeway in front of The Empress, Centennial Square, Bastion Square and downtown streets west of Douglas.

Beefed-up police patrols started Tuesday. Officers in the patrol car covering the southern sector of the city have been told to stop several times at these locations, get out and walk through the area.

But it will lengthen response time somewhat for other police calls. Snowdon said that emergency calls will be answered promptly but the more routine complaints may not get such swift service.

The promise of more police patrols satisfied some of the people at the meeting.

Don Nixon, manager of the Visitors Information Centre on the Causeway, said: "I think the presence of the police is the answer to it all."

But Bastion Square businessmen wanted more police in their vicinity as well to discourage drunks and the drug dealers.

"We want the problem out of the tourist area," said Jim Bennett, proprietor of a games store in the square.

Bennett and Coach and Four restaurant owner Axel Baumbac suggested uniformed police auxiliaries be stationed in the square as a deterrent.

The chief said the police get complaints about drunks all the time, but they're caught in a Catch-22 situation. The Centennial Square habitues come to the police station nearby and ask to sleep in a cell at night.

"We turn them away because we're not a hostel."

Then the drunks return to the square and create a disturbance, forcing the police to arrest them and lock them up. Snowdon said they shouldn't really be in jail, but the police have no place to refer them if they're cantankerous.

Ray Moulton of the Salvation Army said his organization won't take anyone under the influence of alcohol, and McKenzie said the eight-bed detoxification centre on McClure Street won't take anyone unless he comes voluntarily and will behave.

"We'd appreciate any suggestions anyone has," said Snowdon.

'How can athletes go to the capital of such a country?'

WASHINGTON — He is unmistakably an athlete — trim, muscular and sturdy with a soccer player's thick thighs. His name is Karim Karimi, once a midfielder on the Afghanistan national team, its Olympic squad.

But last October, with a passport that cost him $1,200 in bribe money, he fled from Kabul on a flight to India, then traveled to West Germany, to be joined there by 11 other Afghan soccer players who had escaped separately across the mountains of the Pakistan border. Granted political asylum, he has been living here since February with two of his brothers — Obaidulla, a student at George Washington University, and Ahmad, another refugee. And when 26-year-old Karim Karimi spoke of Afghanistan now, his dark eyes flashed with the fury that inspired a planned boycott of the Moscow Olympics long before it occurred to the rest of the world.

Shortly after the Soviet tanks rolled into Afghanistan to enforce its puppet government late last year, the proposed Olympic boycott began to boil among politicians and athletes. But in Afghanistan as early as last September, that nation's soccer team plotted its own boycott.

"Karim says that when the head of the Afghan Olympic Committee told them last September that they would be going to Moscow, the players stopped in a cafeteria for tea to talk about it," explained his interpreter, once a Kabul art professor who requested anonymity to avert reprisals against his relatives there. "But the players did not talk long in the cafeteria. They knew of people who had been arrested for talking against the government. They met later in the house of one of the players and decided they would not go to Moscow."

Looking up quickly, Karimi spoke in Afghan again.

"The decision was made," his interpreter was saying now, "but the players did not express it because of the danger. One by one, they defected. The others couldn't get passports, so they had to escape across the mountains like Ahmad did."

Karim Karimi, his brother Ahmad and their interpreter were in the back room of a neighborhood grocery store owned by Barrington Nicholas, once a New York high school soccer player, who has befriended them.

"Ahmad crossed the border in October," the interpeter continued. "To go from Kabul on the main road from the border, you need a passport, but on small roads and through the villages no passport is necessary if you know how."

Soon after Ahmad Karimi escaped into Pakistan, he joined his brother in West Germany.

To get out, Ahmad says he wore the national clothes, the robes, and carried baskets like the peasants do. It took him two weeks to walk 223 kilometers. He slept in the mountains, sometimes in the tents of the nomads. "That is how the other players got out, too. But six of the players stayed, Karim has written to two of them but he has no reply. The six players have families there and could not leave them."

But now Karim Karimi was talking to his interpreter about another incident he remembered.

"At the Asian soccer tournament in Bangladesh a year ago March," the interpreter said, "some players wanted to defect but the Soviet-controlled Afghan officials had all their passports and the Afghan KGB were all over. Also in Bangladesh the soccer team's boss was attacked because a Moslem nation was playing under a red flag, the new Afghanistan red flag. People threw stones at the bus. Three players were hurt by stones and glass but Karim went to the floor. He was not hurt."

At the Moscow Olympics, the Afghan team will march under that same red flag with "Khalqy," meaning People, on it in gold.

"That is not the Afghan flag, that is the flag the Soviet-controlled government created," the interpreter said. "Black, red and green, that is our real flag since 1919 when Afghanistan got its independence."

In other Olympic years, Afghanistan often was best represented by its wrestlers.

"But now so many sportsman are not co-operating," the interpreter continued. "Karim says that two wrestling champions are fighting the Soviets now — Plawan Ibrahim and Plawan Ahmadjon. The word Plawan means champion. One is up in the mountains, the other is attacking Soviet vehicles in the north."

Karimi was in West Germany when the talk of an Olympic boycott began.

"He says he was so happy to hear it," the interpreter said. "It is very difficult for the people of the United States to understand the crimes that are happening in Afghanistan, the things going on. For the athletes who still want to go to the Olympics, he sends a message — the Kremlin has massacred 250,000 people, executed 40,000 intellectuals, displaced 800,000 people, destroyed 300 villages. How can athletes go to the capital of such a country that is commiting crimes against humanity and freedom? When the athletes think of the Olympics, they should think of those people in Afghanistan fighting for their rights. Winning the hearts of those people is more important than winning a medal."

But as a soccer player who in Kabul earned $75 a month, Karimi is hoping to find a job in America as a soccer player.

His dark eyes flashing again, Karimi spoke in Afghan to his interpreter.

"Karim wants to say," the interpreter translated, "that the other Afghan players who are in West Germany hope to come to the United States soon and form their own team. But when Afghanistan gets its freedom, he will go back there and serve his country as a player or as a coach. Everybody will go back."

Sports tonight

Shamrocks in lacrosse action, plenty of softball and the opening of the Canadian senior synchronized swimming championships highlight sports activity tonight in Greater Victoria.

The Rocks are at home to New Westminster Salmonbellies in a Western Lacrosse Association game at 8 p.m. at Memorial Arena.

Softball all gets under way at 6:30 p.m. and has Tally-Ho versus Athletics in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's League game at Central Park; New York, New York against Strathcona Stingers and McDonald Furniture versus Vidalin Construction in Victoria-Saanich Women's League games at Hyacinth Park; Rebels against Saints and Mega-Power meeting Coast Projects in Macdonald Park Men's League games at Macdonald Park; and Remco versus Capital Builders in a Heywood Men's League game at Heywood Avenue Park.

The synchronized swimming championships start with opening ceremonies at 6:30 followed by solo preliminaries at 7 p.m. at the Crystal Pool.

Stars want share of 'help'

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Philadelphia coach Pat Quinn figures Minnesota North Stars are getting all the assistance they need from the officials, but Glen Sonmor is looking for aid from another source.

"We need a little help from above," said the North Stars' coach after his team dropped a 3-2 decision to the Flyers on Tuesday night in the National Hockey League semifinals.

Philadelphia took a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series and can wrap things up Thursday night at the Spectrum. The sixth game, if necessary, is slated for the Met Centre in Bloomington on Sunday.

"They're getting the help from above," said Sonmor. "We need to be a little luckier.

"Look at that second goal of theirs. (Bill) Barber shoots and it's stopped, but one of our guys knocks it off the goalie's skate and into the net. It's just not bouncing our way."

Minnesota rookie Tom McCarthy and Philadelphia's Reggie Leach had traded first-period goals before the fluke tally midway through the second period.

Barber, who had scored four goals against the North Stars on Sunday night, was credited with his eighth and ninth of the playoffs. But only the ninth was legitimate.

Just 10 seconds after Minnesota goalie Gary Edwards had stopped a clean breakaway by Ken Linseman, Barber let fly with a shot from the point. Edwards made the save, but defenceman Brad Maxwell, trying to steer the puck behind the net, bounced it off Edwards' skate and into the goal for a 2-1 Flyers' lead.

"Gary and I got our signals crossed," explained Maxwell. "I tried to clear it between he and the net, but I don't think he saw what I was doing.

"It was just one of those things. If I had one of those down at their net, I probably wouldn't have scored."

Barber's second goal, also unassisted, made it 3-1, but Mike Polich cut the margin to 3-2 at 13:56 of the final period and the Flyers then had to kill off a hooking penalty on Leach in the final three minutes to secure the victory.

It was the last of 13 penalties for the Flyers, compared with seven called against Minnesota.

"It's almost like someone is trying to give something to somebody," suggested Quinn, whose club had to face 12 powerplay situations by the North Stars.

"It's unfortunate that we have to play a game like that," he said. "I am totally frustrated by it.

"There is no other way to put it. I have no idea what to do in a game where there are penalties like that except go ahead and kill them off. What else can you do?"

Nothing, but that's just what the Flyers have been doing. In the last two games, Minnesota has scoed on only one of 27 man-advantage opportunites.

"Luck," repeated Sonmor. "We need a little more luck."

Centre Gilbert Perreault scored three goals and Derek Smith had two, leading the Sabres to a 7-4 victory Tuesday night that cut the Islanders' lead in the best-of-seven National Hockey League semifinal to 3-1. The fifth game will be played Thursday night at Buffalo.

"There was a lot of soul-searching on the team," said right winger Danny Gare after the Sabres had reversed the score of the third game Saturday night.

"Maybe the extra day off to think about it helped too. If we had had to come back one day later, who knows what might have happened?"

The Sabres knew full well what might have happened. They might have been swept by the underdog Islanders in four games and been relegated to watching the Stanley Cup final on television. They still might, but they'll have at least another say in the matter.

"We knew all that has been said about us," Gare said. "They said we couldn't win the big one, but this should build confidence."

"Winning in this building the way we did has to help."

The Sabres won after falling behind 3-1 in the fourth minute of the second period. Probably no one would have been surprised had they folded right there.

But Smith scored at 7:21 to spark a three-goal flurry in a span of 3:49 — Perreault on the power play at 9:29 and again at even strength at 11:10 — before Smith scored a power play goal with 30 seconds left in the period.

"We didn't have time to think about being behind," said Gare. "You can't think, 'Hey, we're down 3-1 — what do we do now?'

"You just have to go out there and start playing and get it done."

Sabres' coach Scotty Bowman said much of the strategy was abandoned by that time, with only one consideration important: getting tired skaters off the ice.

"Tonight both teams kind of ended all the strategy," said Bowman. "We were just trying to keep fresh guys on the ice."

The Sabres, who received single goals from Don Luce and Tony McKegney, lost defenceman Ric Seiling in the first period, but his shoulder injury was not as serious as first feared.

Bob Bourne and Bob Nystrom scored two goals each for the Islanders, with one of Bourne's scores coming on a power play. He has nine playoff goals, a club record. Trottier pushed his points total to 20, another club record.

Buffalo had 35 shots at the Islanders goal, tended in the first two periods by Billy Smith, who gave up five goals, and in the third by Glenn Resch, who gave up one before Perreault put his third of the night into an empty net with 13 seconds left in regulation time.

Bowman, who said Don Edwards probably will start in the Buffalo goal Thursday night despite Bob Sauve's strong 27-save performance in victory, denied that there was any special satisfaction in chasing Smith from the Islanders goal after his sparkling play in the series.

Bowman said Perreault's outburst was welcome. He had scored his first goal of the series Saturday night, and Bowman suggested left winger Richard Martin may erupt before the series is over.

The Islanders seemed undeterred by the loss, knowing they still hold a commanding lead.

"They were fortunate to get out of that game and they know it," Trottier said of the Sabres.

Swimmers try for national crowns

By MAX LOW

There aren't many sports in which, when you take in a press conference, you get a show as well!

And there are even fewer sports in which Canada is (still) No.1.

But there is synchronized swimming.

Born in Canada, which continues to reign as synchro queen of the world, the sport brings its best to Victoria this week for the annual national championships.

Those championships get under way with preliminaries tonight at 7 and again Thursday at 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. at the Crystal Pool and wind up with finals Friday night and Saturday afternoon.

Before it all got under way, though, officials took time out to explain to the uninitiated media just what synchronized swimming is all about and, lest their mere words be lost amongst us, the lovely young athletes put on a special display in the pool during Tuesday's press conference at Laurel Point Inn.

There, we got a chance to talk to recently-retired world champion Helen Vanderburg and to Jo Jo Carrier, who came here as Canadian champion the last time the national meet was held in Victoria eight years ago and returns with high hopes her younger sisters, twins Lyne and Lyna, and other members of the Quebec team she coaches will carry off a lot of titles.

Before the solo, duet and team routines, though, came the very demanding compulsory figures and, as Mary Ann Reeves, technical director for Synchro Swim Canada, pointed out, if you don't win compulsory figures you usually don't win!

In that respect the sport is very much like figure skating, one of the most popular features of the Winter Olympics. And, just like figure skating, the swimmers follow the figures by doing "their own thing" in the water instead of on ice, in the form of their routines, the creative part of synchronized swimming.

Though synchronized swimming is not yet an accepted Olympic sport and hasn't enjoyed the fan following both competitors and officials feel it deserves, it is a sport of which Canadians should be proud.

"Synchronized swimming began in Canada 55 years ago, when we held out first national championships," Mary Ann Reeves explained. "Very quickly it spread to America and today it is popular in Japan. Those are the top three countries in the world."

But it doesn't all end there.

"More than 20 different countries hold national synchronized swimming championships," she pointed out. "So you can see it's very widespread."

As far as Canada is concerned, though, the talent doesn't appear to be spread across the country.

As well as the Carrier twins, there are also the Montreal twins Penny and Vicky Vilagos making up the powerful Equipe Elite de Quebec team which will be trying to retain its national title here against the strong Calgary Aquabelles, which star Helen Vanderburg's former duet partner Kelly Kryczka.

But, outside of those two few other teams have much of a chance, even though there are 104 top swimmers from all across Canada competing for the solo, duet and team titles.

Despite the fact the competition is being held here and Iris Jeune of Victoria is meet director, there are no synchronized swimmers from Vancouver Island taking part.

"The Victoria Crystalettes are a young team right now and are only at provincial not national level," explained their former coach vivacious redhead Noel (she was born near Christmas time) Gray.

Only hope B.C. has for a title, in fact, is with the Surrey Aquatic Club and the Vancouver Aquasonics but they have little chance in upsetting the Calgary or Quebec girls.

Certainly there has traditionally been a concentration of synchro swim strength in these two centres, agreed Mary Ann Reeves but she felt it's changing slowly and growing considerably in other areas of the country.

"There are around 3,000 athletes registered with Synchro Swim Canada — but these are only the ones who compete," she said. "And there are between 8,000 and 10,000 recreational synchro swimmers across Canada!"

Solo preliminaries begin tonight at the Crystal. There will be duet preliminaries at 1 p.m. Thursday and team preliminaries at 8 that night. Figure competition will be held all day Friday from 9:30 a.m. with the duet finals set for 8 p.m.

Solo finals are scheduled for noon Saturday and they'll be followed by the team finals and the awards presentation.

World travel book leads to daydreams

It's heady stuff for these warm spring days and furnishes fuel for numerous daydreams.

Whether close to home in British Columbia or off in the most far-flung corner of the world, the newly revised and expanded 1980 Worldwide Adventure TravelGuide offers trips to suit every whim.

The book, distributed by Random House of Canada and edited by the American Adventurers Association, costs $12.50 and contains an exhaustive listing over over 3,000 outdoor trips spanning the globe.

Each of four major sections — land, air, water and underwater — offers descriptions of trips, the cost, season and contacts for nearly every conceivable activity.

Just to give a few examples: land adventures include mountaineering, skiing, dogsledding, wildlife safaris, cultural expeditions and bicycle touring; air adventures take in ballooning, soaring, flying and hang gliding; water adventures encompass river rafting, canoeing, sailing, cruising and houseboating; and underwater adventures are broken down into diving and research expeditions.

Each activity listing is further divided into areas of the world: Australasia, Canada, Europe, Mexico, Middle East, South America and United States.

Trips, for the most part, seek to involve the participant in some form of physical and mental activity rather than just offering a passive "sightseer" role.

True, many of the jaunts are fairly expensive. But there is also enough variety to suite most pocketbooks.

Another recently-published guide is the Northwest Boat Travel 1980 Guide, which covers the waters of Puget Sound, San Juan Islands, Vancouver Island (inside portions), Gulf Islands, Vancouver, Sunshine Coast, Deolation Sound, Discovery Passage and Johnstone Strait.

The book is available by itself for $3.95 or as part of a quarterly publication that includes three magazines for a subscription price of $6. Canadian money is accepted.

The address to write is:

Northwest Boat Travel, Post Office Box 1147, Mount Vernon, Wash., U.S.A 98273.

It isn't intended to give precise navigational details but provides excellent information on available services, general directions and distances and points of interest. Proper charts for navigating each area are also listed.

Van Isle Wallaby Club will hold its inaugural salmon derby Sunday with weigh-in at 2 p.m. at Pedder Bay Marina.

Various trophies and hidden-weight prizes are available and a Peetz rod and reel will be given away as the draw prize.

The newly-formed charitable organization hopes to have a prize for every salmon weighed in and tickets, which cost $10, may be purchased either at the Pedder Bay Marina or the Royal Oak Gulf service station, 4513 West Saanich.

Scrap Iron's chopper sets up Pirate victory

By Canadian Press

There isn't a lot of visual artistry in his play. That's why Phil Garner is called Scrap Iron.

The Pirates second baseman participated in two of Pittsburgh's four double plays in a National League defensive struggle with Los Angeles Dodgers on Tuesday, but it was his Baltimore chop through the infield that proved the inartistic highlight of the night.

"It wasn't the prettiest hit that I've ever had, but I'll take it," Garner said. "I just wanted to make contact.

"I swung at a ball at my ankles, but it turned out all right."

Garner's chopper bounded over the head of shortstop Bill Russell and brought home Bill Robinson with the winning run in the ninth inning as Pittsburgh won its sixth game in eight, 2-1. Robinson and Bill Madlock had singled successively, and reliever Steve Howe loaded the bases with an intentional pass to Lee Lacy.

The Pirates' four double plays, a game high this season, kept lefty John Candelaria out of trouble much of the game and included an inning-ending effort in the fifth that was exemplary of Garner's artistry.

With one out, catcher Steve Yeager singled. Los Angeles starter Don Sutton then bounced one to shortstop Tim Foli. Garner took the throw and relayed to first despite Yeager's rolling body block.

"Yeager hit me good, but it was a clean lick," Garner said. "I don't ever begrudge anybody for taking me out on a double play like that."

In other National League games, Houston Astros defeated Montreal Expos 8-4, San Diego Padres blanked Chicago Cubs 4-0, Philadelphia Phillies clobbered Atlanta Braves 10-5, Cincinnati Reds outslugged New York Mets 12-10 in 14 innings and St. Louis Cardinals beat San Francisco Giants, 10-7.

In the American League, Baltimore Orioles bounced Minnesota Twins 10-3, New York Yankees edged Milwaukee Brewers 6-5, Toronto Blue Jays nipped California Angels 3-2, Cleveland Indians shaded Oakland A's 4-3, Chicago White Sox blanked Kansas City Royals 2-0, Texas Rangers whipped Boston Red Sox 7-2 and Detroit Tigers defeated Seattle Mariners, 9-5.

Pittsburgh took a 1-0 lead in the first on Willie Stargell's run-scoring single, and Los Angeles tied it in the sixth with Steve Garvey's RBI single.

Both starting pitchers benefitted from some fine defence. Dodgers right fielder Reggie Smith threw Foli out at the plate in the first inning. Rudy Law and Dusty Baker each made fine running catches in the outfield for Los Angeles.

"You figure between these two teams, there would be more runs scored," Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said, "but Sutton pitched very well.

"Candelaria pitched well, and (Kent) Tekulve was tough."

Candelaria went eight innings, giving up six hits. Sutton scattered six hits through seven innings. Tekulve claimed his third win without a loss with an inning of scoreless relief. Steve Howe, 1-1, got the loss.

Legion nips 'Runners to open in fine style

Legion, which finished on the bottom rung last season, came up with an all-out effort to trip Richmond Roadrunners 18-16 before approximately 300 fans.

Ed Van Dyk led the Esquimalt attack with four goals and one assist while Will Reid had two and four and Terry Jay was one and four.

Bruce Alexander and John Crowther scored three goals each for the Legion squad, which outshot Roadrunners 56-53 and had narrow 7-6 and 13-12 period leads. Gord Taylor also had two goals and other single tallies were contributed by Jim Lightbody, Al Zozula and Brian Bell.

Jody Twa was the top gunner for Richmond with five goals; Art Hazell and Todd Lorentz added three each; and singles came from Jamie McDonald, Bob Johnson, Glen Jensen, Doug Morrison and Dean Callard.

Esquimalt, which scored seven goals on the odd-man play and two while shorthanded, took 26 of the 51 penalty minutes assessed during the game. Esquimalt was hit for three odd-man goals in the third period while being tagged with six penalties while Richmond had none.

Herb Isherwood and Derek Croucher shared netminding duties for Legion. Isherwood blocked 14 shots in the first 30 minutes and Croucher finished up with 23 saves.

Legion next plays Burnaby Cablevision on the Mainland this Sunday and plays host to Coquitlam Adanacs on May 13.

NBC drops Olympic TV at cost of $22 million

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Broadcasting Co. said today it will not televise the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow and will suffer a loss of about $22 million as a result.

An NBC spokesman said that $70 million had been spent preparing for the Olympics and that 90 per cent of the money would be covered by insurance, leaving it with a loss of $7 million.

In addition, however, he said assorted expenses not covered by insurance but relating to plans for the Olympic telecasts, would leave RCA with an additional after-tax loss of $15 million.

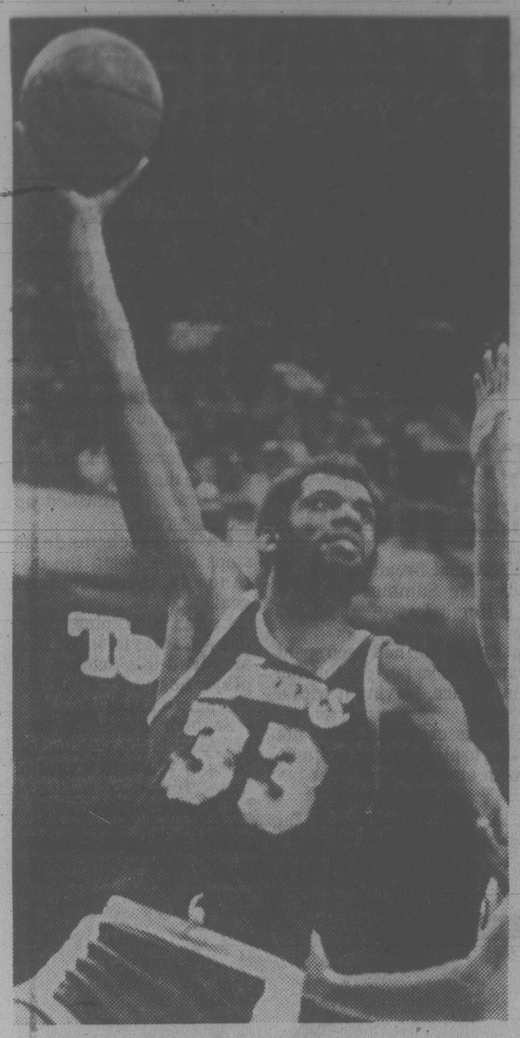
Holding Jabbar to 30 points major task



Kareem Abdul-Jabbar going up for shot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — From the day Kareem Abdul-Jabbar entered the National Basketball Association back in 1969, it was evident that he was a player of extraordinary talent.

But this season, bolstered by a strong supporting cast and displaying new-found intensity and enthusiasm, the "Big Guy," as his team-mates call him, has been playing better than ever.

"He's older, he's wiser — he's something," said Philadelphia 76ers coach Billy Cunningham after Abdul-Jabbar's 33 points, 14 rebounds and six blocked shots led the Lakers to a 109-102 victory in Sunday's opening game of the NBA championship series.

"Four years I've been playing against Kareem, and it seems like he's improved every year," said Caldwell Jones, the Sixers' seven-footer who will have at least partial responsibility for containing Abdul-Jabbar when the best-of-seven playoff finals resume Wednesday night.

Darryl Dawkins, Philadelphia's muscular 23-year-old pivotman, got in early foul trouble trying to play against Abdul-Jabbar Sunday and fouled out after only 18 minutes of action.

"We've got to keep Darryl in the lineup more, so maybe we'll make some changes," said Cunningham, ninting that he might move Dawkins onto Lakers forward Jim Chones and give Jones the task of tangling with the 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar.

Jones knows it's no easy task.

"You've got to bump him once or twice," he said. "You've got to lean on him.

"You've got to try to make him shoot the jump shot. Then you've got to keep him from getting the rebound if he does miss.

"You've got to see if you can hold him to between 30 and 35 points, because if he gets 40 you've really got problems."

It is a measure of the 33-year-old Abdul-Jabbar's amazing skill that an opponent would consider limiting him to 30 points a major accomplishment. For many other NBA player, a 30-point playoff game would be a career highlight.

But just last year, several writers did stories contending that Abdul-Jabbar was over the hill.

This year, however, it's been all flowers and roses. Fans here have rediscovered the Lakers, and Abdul-Jabbar. And Abdul-Jabbar has responded with an enthusiasm that was noticeably lacking from his play in recent years.

Why the change?

Among the most popular reasons are the arrival of ebullient rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson, whose enthusiasm is infectious; the purchase of the Lakers by Dr. Jerry Buss, who stroked Abdul-Jabbar's ego with words and then backed them up by giving him a new $1 million a year contract and the steady, level-headed coaching of Jack McKinney and Westhead.

Abdul-Jabbar contends the change has not been that great, and prefers to let his actions speak for him.

"The overall difference this year is what happens on the court," Abdul-Jabbar said. "Because people wanted to give me all the blame, now they want to give me all the credit, to say I've changed and come through.

"I think I've been pretty consistent the whole time."

Baseball strike would end season

HOUSTON (AP) — Ken Aspromonte, who has been feeling the pulse of both sides in the major league baseball dispute, says he believes a player strike this month will be the end of the 1980 season.

Aspromonte, who formerly played for and managed Cleveland Indians, said Tuesday he has numerous contacts with players and with at least six major league owners.

"I just get the feeling if the players strike, the owners are going to close up shop for the season," said Aspromonte, who now operates a beer distributorship. "They are on a crash course with neither side giving in.

"The players tell me 'Ken we're not going to give any more, we voted and we're going to strike.' The owners are saying the same thing."

During his days of negotiating with players, Aspromonte said there was always an area for compromise.

Hard-hitting Peterborough leads Memorial Cup race

BRANDON (CP) — The tough-checking Peterborough Petes showed they are ready to lay claim to a spot in the 1980 Memorial Cup final with an 8-6 victory over Cornwall Royals Tuesday night.

The Petes came from two goals behind with a five goal burst in the second period and then weathered a rash of penalties in the third to hand the Royals the loss.

Peterborough of the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League finishes the first half of the Memorial Cup series with two wins while Cornwall, the Quebec entry, has a record of one win and one loss.

Regina Pats of the Western Hockey League are winless.

The series now moves to Regina for three games with Peterborough facing the Pats tonight.

Regina plays Cornwall Tuesday night, and the Petes and the Royals have a rematch Friday night.

The top two teams from the series will play in a sudden death final Sunday afternoon.

Petes' coach Mike Keenan says he isn't worried about facing the Pats on home ice the night after his club's demanding contest against the Royals.

"We're used to the hitting . . . we're used to that kind of rugged schedule," Keenan said. "It's going to be a real contest for us."

The Cornwall and Peterborough players were handing each other stiff checks from the opening whistle Tuesday night and while the Petes carried much of the play, their shooting was off and they were forced to come back twice after the Royals took one goal leads.

Late in the first period, Cornwall began to dominate and a goal by Gilles Crepeau put the Royals ahead 3-2. He scored again at 0:24 of the second to make it 4-2 before the Petes began to control the boards and cut down the Cornwall attack.

Then the Peterborough offence clicked, with Brad Ryder and Tom Fergus scoring within less than a minute to tie the game 4-4. Before another five minutes were up, Larry Floyd added another two goals and Bill Gardner fired one to give Petes a lead they never relinquished.

Argentina's soccer organization blocking $6 million player sale

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The Argentine Football Association has refused to authorize the $6-million sale of midfielder Diego Maradona to Barcelona of Spain.

The association's executive committee voted unanimously Tuesday to respect a 1978 rule barring the transfer of Maradona and 33 other members of the Argentine national team to foreign clubs before the 1982 World Cup playoffs.

The action means a multimillion-dollar contract Maradona signed Saturday to play for the Spanish club will be invalidated unless the federation's ban is successfully challenged in the Argentine courts.

Julio Grondoa, president of the federation, acknowledged the ban did not have the force of law, and officials of Argentinos Juniors, Maradona's team, indicated it would challenge it as a violation of the Argentine labor code.

Argentinos Juniors agreed last Friday to give up Maradona for $6 million — the highest transfer fee ever offered for a soccer player. Maradona would receive $2 million for his sale to Barcelona, where he would play under a three-year contract that could earn him another $2 million.

Going distance in Indianapolis 500 counts more than having fastest machine

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It doesn't matter how fast you go if your car can't go the full 500 miles, says Johnny Rutherford, downplaying his role as the favorite in this year's Indianapolis 500.

"Endurance is something we've been paying a great deal of attention to . . . going the distance," says Rutherford, who has apparently reached enough speed to suit him and is concentrating on keeping his car in one piece.

"To finish first, you must first finish . . . that's sort of been our motto," the two-time Indy winner said Tuesday. Accomplishing that, however, is a very uncertain science.

"There's never any guarantees in racing," he said. "The only guarantee is that if it breaks, you get to keep both pieces.

"So, really, I don't know. We just have to try to do enough testing, and hopefully we'll make the right decisions and everything will come together."

In recent years, victory here has gone more often than not to the driver whose car has been able to outlast everyone else's — and that hasn't necessarily been the fastest.

Last year, although he was the fastest qualifier, Rick Mears seemed headed for second place until car trouble slowed team-mate Bobby Unser 18 laps from the finish. Mears led the rest of the race and took home more than $250,000.

Rutherford, 18th last year, has joined Jim Hall's Chaparral racing team this season and won the opening race at Ontario, Calif., last month.

But he doesn't like to be tabbed the favorite.

"There's only one place you can go from there," he said. "It's just a little uncomfortable for people to say you're a shoo-in . . . that there's no way for you to lose.

As he did on Monday, Rutherford again turned in the top practice speed of the day with a lap at 191.449 miles an hour (308.099 kilometres an hour). On Monday, he was clocked at more than 192.4 m.p.h. (309.6 km.p.h.).

"Really, I'll be surprised if it goes much quicker than that because of the 48 inches of boost," Rutherford said, referring to U.S. Auto Club restrictions on manifold pressure.

"Yes and no," he said, asked whether he expected to go that fast this early in practice. "We've got our program we're trying to adhere to.

"Evidently, some of the changes we've made were what we hoped to reach this, but not as soon. The car was very, very good."

Qualifications for the May 25 race will be this weekend and May 17-18.

Avie's two triples spark Seasprays

Catcher Avie Stubbington emerged as the hitting hero Tuesday night as Seaspray Properties downed Royal Oak Inn 3-1 at Central Park for their first win of the season in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

Stubbington tripled twice, drove in a run and scored once for the Seasprays, a new junior club in the 10-team league.

In the first inning, Stubbington tripled home Darryl Coldwell and then came up with another three-bagger in the third before scoring the winning run on a sacrifice fly by Ross Anderson.

Seasprays' third run came in the sixth inning when Anderson doubled, advanced on a wild pitch and scored on a groundout.

Winning pitcher Jim Bowden allowed only two hits in going the full distance while Al Standlund gave up five hits in taking the loss.

Pam Jones pitched a one-hitter and took her record to 4-0 as Island Dryco Breakers thrashed Macdonald Furniture Juniors 10-0 in a Victoria-Saanich Women's Softball League game at Hyacinth Park.

The only hit Jones gave up was a bunt single by Jackie Lay as she struck out nine and walked four.

In the other women's game, Tillicum Shoppers Drug Mart and Victoria Athletics played to a 1-1 tie.

In a Heywood Men's League game at Heywood Avenue Park, Mears Realty scored six runs in the first inning and went on to a 9-7 win over Ingraham Roadway Inn.

And in the Macdonald Park Men's League, Russ Hughes hurled a one-hitter to lead Trafalgrar to a 12-2 win over Labatts and Mayfair Insurance scored three runs in the eighth inning to beat James Bay Inn, 12-9.

Mt. Doug grabs school relay title

Though Mt. Douglas took top over-all honors, independent schools gave a strong showing Tuesday in the annual high school relays at Centennial Stadium.

Mt. Doug won the girls' team division and placed first over-all for combined boys' and girls' team events with a total of 134 points.

St. Michael's University School was second with 54 points while Brentwood College, which won the boys' team title, finished third over-all with 34 points.

Two special open events were won by Debbie Scott of the University of Victoria and Randy Cox of the Victoria Mercuries.

Scott edged out Debbie Campbell of the Mercuries to win the women's 800 metres in 2:06.3 and Cox beat clubmate Tom Michel to the tape to win the men's 1,000 metres in 2:31.3.

Danes reject Games boycott

COPENHAGEN (AP) — The Danish Olympic Committee voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to send a team to the Summer Olympics in Moscow, ignoring U.S. President Carter's call for a boycott.

Kratzert blasts back with five birdies

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — Bill Kratzert birdied five of the last nine holes Tuesday, shot a course-record 65 and collected $30,000 for his one-stroke win in a $170,000 benefit golf tournament.

While Kratzert was burning up the back nine, first-round co-leader J.C. Snead found nothing but trouble on the finishing holes and came in second at 135, winning $18,000. Ben Crenshaw collected $14,000 for his third-place finish, three shots off the pace in the tournament sanctioned by the U.S. Professional Golfers Association.

Gene Littler, tied with Snead after the first round, blew to a 73 Tuesday and finished tied for sixth at 139.

Kratzert, who has not won on the PGA tour since the 1977 Greater Hartford Open, said a birdie on 16 convinced him he had a chance to win.

"After 16, I thought I better take note of what I was doing today and buckle up."

Snead led the tournament until the 13th hole, where he hit his drive out of bounds and had to scramble for bogey.

Then, on 16 — a water-guarded par three — Snead plunked his tee shot into the pond and took a double-bogey.

Kratzert's 25-foot birdie putt on 18 clinched the win.

Bring back fun to minor hockey, report urges

LARRY REGAN
. . . stresses coaching

By ALEX BINKLEY

OTTAWA (CP) — The basics of skating, passing, shooting and just plain fun must be brought back to minor hockey if the game is going to remain this country's national sport, says the final report of the Canadian hockey review released Tuesday.

The two-year review, which cost the federal sports department about $200,000, also calls for an improved system of training coaches, with emphasis on developing their ability to teach youngsters, and establishment of a hockey league for girls.

It also proposed a massive streamlining of the hockey rulebook and more independence for referees to make officiating across the country consistent and fair.

Larry Regan, a former National Hockey League player and coach, said the main thrust of the report is for the teaching of skills to the younger players through better coaching and more practices. In that way, boys could see their skills improve as they get older, will enjoy the fame more and be less inclined to give it up, he told reporters.

The report also proposes that hockey leagues for girls be started by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA), a move which the body has rejected in the past.

The report also says the game has become the preserve of boys from middle-class French and English homes. Poorer families cannot afford to outfit their sons and immigrant families have not tended to encourage their sons to play.

Hockey leagues and organizations now outside the CAHA should be encouraged to join so they could take advantage of the government-supported association's services and programs.

Justice John Urie of the Federal Court, who headed the study, said its previous recommendations on steps to control violence in the sport have been generally accepted by the CAHA, and its president Murray Costello has taken a strong interest in the review.

The report is full of rule-change suggestions that will need CAHA approval and are certain to give minor hockey players, coaches and officials plenty to talk about during the next few months.

Regan said the rule changes could be implemented by the fall.

The proposed rule changes are designed to keep the game moving and to make it easier for referees to call the play. Regan said there are about 350 rules for hockey and they need to be simplified.

Among the proposed rule changes are smaller ice surfaces and lighter pucks for young players; moving goal nets an additional five feet, making them 15 from the back boards; moving the blue lines out five feet and allowing two-line passes over the centre red line, which would be kept only for icing infractions.

The report also suggests eliminating faceoffs for infractions such as offside passes in favor of giving the puck to the other team and enlarging the goal crease to prevent the scenes of mayhem that often occur in front of a goaltender.

A player assessed a two-minute penalty for a personal foul such as holding would be required to serve the entire penalty even if his team is scored against while he is off the ice. Under current rules a penalized player is allowed back if his team is scored against.

The report also suggests that a national university hockey league be started with federal assistance and that scholarships for hockey players be started to keep them from going to U.S. schools.

The responsibility for training referees should be taken over by provincial branches of the CAHA to reduce pressure on officials from local hockey associations.

Regan said he would like to see the CAHA develop a skill-testing program that would lead to a national competition similar to the Showdown Series featured on Natimnal Hockey League broadcasts.

Sport Minister Gerald Regan said the government has no plans to provide extra money to help the CAHA and other hockey bodies act on the report's recommendations.

Face-mask standards

OTTAWA (CP) — Face protectors for lacrosse and hockey players sold after Sept. 1 will have to conform to requirements set by the Canadian Standards Association, Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet has announced.

The standards, designed to provide maximum visibility and protection for the athlete's eyes, were developed by a committee composed of hockey players, university researchers and manufacturers, Ouellet said.

He said the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will require its players to wear only approved masks. Hockey helmets for amateur players already must pass federal safety requirements.

The association started work on standards after several hockey players were blinded in one eye.

Riders, fan killed

AMMERZODEN, Netherlands (Reuter) — Two Dutch riders and a spectator were killed Monday in an accident at an international motorcycle meet.

The racers, competing in a national 500-cc competition which opened the program, collided and then crashed into a group of spectators, organizing officials said. Two other spectators were seriously injured and taken to hospital.

Some 20,000 fans watched the event. The officials said it was the worst accident in Dutch motor sport in years.

14 more players banned

MILAN, Italy (AP) — The disciplinary commission of the Italian soccer league Tuesday suspended 14 more players and the president and coach of Juventus of Turin for their alleged involvement in a scheme of fixed games, a scandal that has shaken Italy's soccer world.

Tuesday's suspensions brought to 34 the number of players barred from games, pending further investigation.

The latest suspensions involved Giampiero Boniperti, long-time president of Juventus, the club backed by auto-maker Fiat, and the coach of the team Giovanni Trapattoni.

Both Boniperti and Trapattoni were named in an investigation into a Juventus-Bologna championship game which ended in an allegedly fixed tie.

The president and the general manager of Bologna as well as six Bologna players, including veteran striker Giuseppe Savoldi, were also suspended.

Other suspensions involved two players of first-division Avellino and six players of three second division teams.

Disqualifications up to life might be imposed on those considered guilty of receiving bribes to fix games as dictated by an illegal betting syndicate.

In a parallel proceeding, 38 persons, including 33 players, will stand trial on charges of fraud.

Paolo Rossi, striker of Perugia and of the national team, is among the defendants.

The federation has decided to drop Rossi from a list of 40 players from whom the Italian team for the European championships would be picked.

Arsenal choice in Cup final

LONDON (AP) — West Ham United striker Stuart Pearson has declared himself fit for Saturday's Football Association Cup final against Arsenal at Wembley Stadium.

Former England international, Pearson has missed West Ham's last three matches with a neck injury, but is a certain starter for Saturday's match against London rivals Arsenal, bidding to win the Cup for the second successive season.

Pearson, signed from Manchester Unnited last year, missed West Ham's 4-1 win over Charlton in a Second Division match Monday night, but is convinced he will be fit for the showpiece of the British soccer season.

"I will play," he said. "Nothing would make me miss this one.

"I have been training for a week and the injury is improving all the time."

West Ham also omitted key midfield player Alan Devonshire from Monday's game. Devonshire is suffering from blisters and striker David Cross has a slight muscle strain, but both will be fit.

Manager John Lyall's major pre-match decision is where to play Scottish under-23 international Ray Stewart, who has been one of West Ham's key players this season. Stewart could play in midfield in place of Paul Allen, 17, or oust veteran fullback Frank Lampard.

If Allen plays, he will become the youngest player to play in an FA Cup final.

West Ham will start as the underdog against Arsenal, which is playing in the final for the third successive year.

West Ham failed in its bid to win promotion to the First Division this season, while Arsenal is bidding for third place in the First Division and has qualified for the final of the European Cup Winners' Cup.

Arsenal Manager Terry Neill is faced by one difficult selection problem. He must decide between veteran Sammy Nelson and young John Devine for the left back slot.

Striker Frank Stapleton was substituted in the closing minutes of Arsenal's goalless darw with Nottingham Forest on Monday, but will be fit for Saturday's match, Neill confirmed.

The bookmakers make Arsenal 9-4 favorites to retain the Cup. Inconsistent West Ham is rated a 15-8 chance.

Docherty leaves Rangers - again

Docherty and the club have "mutually agreed for him to leave forthwith," a club spokesman said.

Dear Sir:

I would like to take this opportunity to both thank and commend you and your staff.

On February 27, I was notified that a vehicle which I had ordered had arrived one month early. This resulted in the need for immediate financing.

The two other financial institutions I normally deal with could not help me for several days. I then remembered your CAN DO campaign and decided to try it.

At 12:30 p.m. I talked to your Loans Officer (Rona) regarding my problem and was assured that it could be solved in less than a day. At 3:45 p.m. my wife and I were in the bank signing the documents and getting our bank draft.

As a result of this excellent service I was able to quickly process all the paper work associated with the vehicle purchase and enjoy it on the weekend.

I will be rearranging my financial affairs in the next few months to reflect the service your bank has provided.

Again, please extend my thanks to Rona for the excellent service.

Yours very truly,

John D. Wolff

$40M on eight films by Canadian producer

MONTREAL (CP) — Filmplan International Inc., a Canadian film production company, has launched an eight-picture, $40-million program.

Scheduled to go before the cameras in the next few months are Gas, The Fright and a third picture entitled Diplomatic Immunity, Filmplan announced.

No stars were mentioned, but Filmplan described the basic plots of the three films, all of which will be made with the financial participation of the Canadian Film Development Corporation.

Gas is described as an action-packed comedy; Fright is labelled a gripping thriller; and Diplomatic Immunity will be a romantic comedy caper.

Also on the production roster is another version of the Frankenstein classic, this time by Canadian horror director David Cronenberg.

The company is also developing a movie entitled A Friend In Deed, based on Robert Jagoda's novel, and The Totem, adapted by David Morrellfrom his best-selling novel. The Totem is described by Filmplan as a nightmare vision of primal terror.

Author Charles Dennis is currently working on Models, "a story about a woman who almost makes it big in the glittering and cut-throat world of high fashion."

And in 1981, Filmplan will do a movie of the Martin Gray best-seller For Those I Loved — a France-Canada co-production.

Final awards made for music festival

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The hundreds of people involved in the Greater Victoria Music Festival are taking things a little easier this week, which really means getting back to the routine of jobs, housework or study.

The 1980 festival curtain was rung down after the well-attended and warmly received highlights concert at McPherson Playhouse.

A highlight of the highlights concert was the presentation by John Goult of the McPherson Playhouse Foundation Award of $500 to pianist Miranda Wong. The award is for "the most distinguished performance in the highlights concert given by a single performer."

Many awards in the form of bursaries and scholarships have been made available by Victoria firms, institutions, societies and individuals, as well as by the Greater Victoria Festival Association itself. Total amount is $4,147.

Following is a complete list of recipients.

Piano: Kinza Tyrrell, Anderson Piano Tuning Award; Kristin Scott, Mrs. Emily Lee; Janice Boothman and Rebekah Curran, University of Alberta Alumni Victoria branch bursaries; Michelle Himick, GVMFA Edith Ellis Memorial Award; Cary Chow, University of Alberta Alumni; Eve Egoyan, Robert Burns McMicking Chapter IODE Dulcie Fowler Memorial Award; Karen Kling, Jonas Kvarnstrom, Claude McLean, Monica Pfau, Robert Tewelen, GVMFA Awards.

RAPT ATTENTION and instant communication was the response of Grade 1 students at James Bay Community School when they received a visit recently from students of St. Michael's University School Grade 10 drama group. The well-trained school group presented a participation play, The Black Box, written and directed by their drama coach, Colin Skinner. The cast consisted of Andrew Sabiston, Julie Quon, Leslie Hope, Peter McRae, Ian Armstrong and Danica Gleave.

Mushroom Records sued

VANCOUVER (CP) — Paradise Productions Ltd., the production company for the rock group Chilliwack, has filed suit against Mushroom Records Canada Inc. for damages and for breach of an agreement concerning the recording and distribution of a record album.

Paradise also is seeking a declaration that its obligations under the agreement are at an end. Paradise claimed that Mushroom is insolvent, has ceased or threatened to cease carrying on business, and-or has committed an act of bankruptcy.

The record company has slumped since the group Heart left the label in 1977.

The statement of claim filed Monday by Christopher O'Connor, lawyer for Paradise, states that under the agreement, Paradise was to provide artistic services and record albums, and Mushroom was to pay monthly advances to certain artists and to Paradise along with tour costs and recording costs. Mushroom also agreed to distribute records in Canada and the U.S., the statement says.

New air link sought

A new Vancouver company, Coastal Commuter Air Ltd., has asked the air transport committee for authority to operate land-based De Havilland Twin Otter planes between Victoria and Vancouver airports.

The company proposes to charge $8 less than competing airlines on seven flights daily in each direction.

Company president Erik Andersen, a former Pacific Western Airlines executive, said about 70 per cent of the eastbound traffic would be Victorians heading to Vancouver airport to make connections.

SC ministers distrusted?

Money appropriated to individual ministries under the provincial government's Special Purpose Appropriation Act should be included in the estimates of those ministries, NDP finance critic Dave Stupich said Tuesday.

Stupich said it appears the government didn't put the money in the estimates because it wanted to specifically direct the various ministers — 11 of them all told — as to how they might spend various amounts of money.

The act provides for 17 different expenditures including $1 million to the science ministry for research; $2.65 million for a refugee settlment act; $6.5 million to the lands ministry for accelerated park development and $4.5 million to the labor ministry for a youth employment and training program.

Stupich said it is inappropriate that the money should be presented in bill form rather than in the ministerial estimates.

"I suppose the government has been so busy trying to cover up dirty tricks that it didn't have time to prepare estimates properly, perhaps they had no idea how much money they had on hand and after the estimates were prepared they realized they had surplus funds to allocate," he said outside the house.

Stupich said the fact that the money is allocated for specific purposes indicates a lack of trust by the government in the ministers.

Stupich said the opposition should be entitled to speak to the ministers individually to get more details, rather than just Finance Minister Hugh Curtis, who introduced the bill.

Downtown slate

Mrs. Joan Bomford of The Quest for Handcrafts is the new president of the Downtown Victoria Association.

Elected as directors at the annual meeting were Ken Little of Eaton's, Gordon Proctor of Westcoast Savings Union, Bev Grooms of Market Square, John Black of Charms and Jewels, Sandy Grant of McDonald's, Barry Taylor of Taylor's Apparel, Jack Newton of Marks and Spencers, Reg Hind of Eaton's, Cam Young of The Bay and Denis Eyolfson of the Empress Hotel.

The board of directors were authorized to negotiate amalgamation with the Victoria Downtown Business Association and also extend the boundary to Menzies, Niagara and Oswego Streets.

Couple awarded $4,386 after apartment flooded

Damages totalling $4,386.86 have been assigned in a county court judgment to a couple whose suite was flooded in the Lord Simcoe apartments at 440 Simcoe more than two years ago.

The written judgment was by Judge M.L.T. Drake, who heard the circumstances in early April, concerning an incident April 6, 1978.

Plaintiffs were Ellen and John Wilson, whose first floor apartment in the 14-storey building was severely damaged by water escaping from a ruptured pipe in an eighth floor apartment occupied by J.B. Shaver.

A copper pipe leading to a kitchen sink first flooded Shaver's apartment, awakening him at 12:45 a.m. with the sound of dripping water. He reported it at once to building manager Ed Koch, who came up to find water "spraying across the kitchen."

The Wilsons reported their apartment flooded at 1:30.

The building superintendent turned off the supply and immediate steps were taken to mop up water on several floors. This went on the rest of the night and into the next day when extra help was called in.

Drake noted the broken pipe joint had apparently been properly soldered when installed, but failed with the passage of time.

He found no defect in the plumbing nor breach of duty or care on the part of staff or owner, Amon Investments Ltd.

"The real cause of damage was not negligence on the part of the defendant (Amon) but the fact that the leak was not discovered until an enormous quantity of water had escaped," Drake said.

The superintendent estimated five gallons a minute had gushed out.

"It was not discovered because those in a position to discover it were asleep in the ordinary course of events," the court ruled.

Furniture, floor coverings and a TV set were among the property damaged.

"The water made their home virtually uninhabitable for some days," Drake said, setting special damages at $2,386.86 and $2,000 general damages for inconvenience resulting from any negligence on the part of the defendant.

Ship had police-monitoring gear

One of two ships seized during a drug raid near Tofino last May had radio gear for monitoring police and emergency messages in B.C. and two U.S. states, a county court jury was told Tuesday.

The trial of 23 men charged with importing 33.5 tons of cannabis marijuana May 22, 1979, is in its fifth week before Judge M.L.T. Drake and the Crown's evidence was expected to be completed today.

William Deverell, one of five defence counsel, said the accused admit that all electronic and radio gear seized during the raid from motor vessels Samarkanda and Whitecap was compatible and in working order, including a frequency scanner from Whitecap.

In addition, Deverell said, it is admitted the scanner was programmed to pick up certain frequencies.

Crown witness Constable Eric N. Parry, an RCMP electronics specialist, said the scanner could be programmed in groups of 10 for 50 different frequencies.

From a list of frequencies supplied by another officer who took it from one of the ships, Parry said he could see they corresponded to those stored in the scanner, and he was able to identify the agencies to which they were assigned.

He found they included coast guard, Puget Sound area and B.C. police, a government inter-station emergency network; and state police, fisheries patrol, narcotic and vice squad, and the state aeronautics department in Alaska.

There were 10 frequencies assigned in Washington state, 15 Canadian and 21 Alaskan.

Parry agreed with defence counsel Thomas Raphael's suggestion that the person who programmed the scanner would assume the vessel carrying it was to be operated up the coasts of Washington, B.C. and Alaska.

The officer also said a radio transmitter among the seized equipment was capable of broadcasting on six frequencies in the range of 2182-2738 KHz.

This was from among gear found in a motor home seized by U.S. drug enforcement agents May 22 on one of the highest points of land on Orcas Island, in the San Juan Group about 12 miles east of Victoria.

Defence counsel Josiah Wood said it was not at issue that the motor home could be in radio contact with Samarkanda and Whitecap.

The defence also made admissions regarding evidence of camping equipment being purchased in Seattle May 12, the installation of antennas on Whitecap and the radio gear in the motor home.

Staff-Sgt. Robert M. Cruikshank said he travelled by helicopter to No Name Bay, on Sydney Inlet, and seized camping equipment found about 50 feet inland in the vicinity of a number of bales, some of which had been punctured.

Four samples of greenish plant material were identified by an expert in chemical and botanical analysis, Cpl. Murray N. Clark, of the RCMP crime detection laboratory, a Narcotic Control Act analyst.

He said he made four tests to determine that each sample was cannabis marijuana. It was his opinion that cannabis marijuana and cannabis sativa mean the same thing — one a simple way of describing the plant parts, the other being the species.

Staff-Sgt. George W. Hawkes, in charge of the RCMP Victoria drug section, testified the wholesale value of Colombian marijuana in May, 1979, was $800 a pound in Vancouver and Victoria.

Street value of the drug at the time was $100 an ounce, he said, but in very large quantities the wholesale value would range between $300 and $350 a pound.

Shown an envelope entered in evidence, Hawkes said he did not recognize it but the notations on it appeared to refer to sacks and prices.

When re-examined by Crown counsel Gordon Macdonald, Hawkes said a notation of $13.2 million could represent a value based on a credit purchase, or fronting as it would be known in the drug trade.

He made a calculation based on information given to him and arrived at the figure $13.4 million. He said the difference, or fronting, would depend upon the risk involved in disposing of the shipment.

'Bullying attack' draws $500 fine

Judge E.J.C. Stewart called it a cowardly, bullying attack and considered sending its perpetrator to jail when he appeared in county court Tuesday.

B.L. Carpenter, 19, instead was fined $500 for assault causing bodily harm in a group attack on Peter Yurchak, 34, at his 899 Craigflower apartment in Esquimalt last Sept. 6.

M.J. Harrison, 19, and S.L. Sandwith, 20, each were fined $100 for their part in the incident. They pleaded guilty to the lesser offence of common assault.

Court was told Yurchak had driven his car into the apartment parking area about 2 a.m. but was prevented from reaching his stall by persons standing in the way. Several began kicking the car.

He got out and went to a nearby parked truck to get a baseball bat then went to tell the apartment manager to call police.

When the others saw Yurchak with the bat they converged on him and one took it away from him.

Carpenter started to strike Yurchak. Others joined in and Yurchak went down and was kicked 10-20 times.

He said he required stitches to close a head injury, a tooth was broken and there were bruises to other parts of his body.

"No matter how one looks at it," Stewart said, "it was a cowardly, bullying attack — three to one — the kind of attack ordinary citizens have to be protected from."

Cake decoration possible at home

BETTY NEWMAN MAY of La Mesa, California, was recently inducted into the Cake Decorator's Hall of Fame — frosting on a 32-year career which sees her now as one of only a dozen cake decorators in the world who have Hall of Fame status. "When I decorated my first cake I never dreamed of anything like this," she said. "That first cake was for my child's first birthday. To do the decorations I used a 49¢ syringe from the dime store. You should have seen that cake."

It seems to me that many otherwise adventurous cooks are frightened by pastry bags and tubes. I don't why that should be. Maybe the glossy decorated cakes produced in bakeries with the help of pastry bags appear to grow out of some arcane skill best left to bakers. Maybe the process of decorating seems too unforgiving of a little clumsiness. Whatever the reason, I suspect it is not well founded.

True, an unpracticed hand will not do quite the job of a practiced one. But by leaving the decoration of cakes to bakers one is leaving the baking to them, too, and for the good home cook that is a matter of surrender.

Moreover, pastry bags and tubes are useful for chores far beyond the decoration of party cakes. They efficiently fill eclairs, cornets and cream puffs. They can be used to make a petals of butter on a smoked salmon canape, or to stuff eggs with a professional-looking swirl.

For cake decoration it does help if you have just the slightest artistic bent because much of the job is trial-and-error creativity. The best way to decide on a particular pattern of, say, butter-cream flowers (perhaps tinted by vegetable coloring) and a heavy scrolled border of whipped cream is to experiment on a plate before approaching the cake; use a small bag and tube for the more ornate work with butter cream and a large bag and tube for the sweeping work with whipped cream.

At the start you will need at least two bags — a 10-inch one, which costs about $3.50, and a 14-inch one ($4.50), along with perhaps eight or 10 tubes of different sizes and shapes, costing less than a dollar each and sometimes sold in sets. The tubes simply drop into the bag from the top before the bag is filled with cream. Some of these nozzles are flattened to make ribbons, others are jagged and rounded to make swirls, and still others are specifically designed to produce petals and leaves. A plastic coupler attaches to the pastry bag and is a sensible purchase (at 85 cents) because it allows you to switch tubes without emptying the bag first.

You'll need to know a few of the basics. When filling a pastry bag, the only way to do it neatly is to make a cuff of two or three inches at the top; place one hand up under the cuff to hold the bag securely. Then spoon in the cream with the other hand, filling the bag no more than halfway. After the bag is filled, twist it closed, then wrap the index finger and thumb of one hand around the top of the swollen area of the bag. You will use those fingers and the palm of that hand to squeeze the cream downward. The other hand guides the tube or holds pastry to be filled.

When you begin your practice run, try a variety of rhythms and motions. To give a ribbon on the periphery of a cake some character, rock your hands back and forth, producing waves as you move along. In creating flowers with petals around them, you might start with a burst of cream swirling upward and then finish it off by delicately placing petals around the swirl.

ROYAL ICING

2 lbs. confectioner's sugar
¼ cup meringue powder
3 egg whites, plus warm water to make ¾ cup liquid

Mix all the ingredients together and bet on low speed until the icing will form stiff peaks. The icing must be kept covered with a damp cloth at all times, and must be kept completely free of grease of any kind.

One way to be sure the mixing bowl is free of grease is to rinse it with vinegar, then with water.

This next royal icing is for ordinary use, such as piping borders and some flowers. It calls for deluxe meringue powder. That's a different product from the recipe above.

ROYAL ICING II

1 lb. confectioner's sugar
¼ cup deluxe meringue powder
½ cup warm water

Blend ingredients and beat them on low speed for five to seven minutes. This ieing must also be covered with a damp cloth and must be kept completely free of grease.

Simple cost cutters don't cut down taste

Chicken, chuck steak, beans 'n sausage. They all taste good. But since we are serving them more often these days, there's a frantic scramble to find more good recipes that include these cuts.

Here are three recipes — the trick being to simmer meat in a seasoned liquid until it is tender. And serve these tasty dishes over another food like rice. It costs just about three cents per half cup serving, and it makes a perfect setting for a saucy entree. Rice doesn't really have a flavour of its own, but it readily takes on the flavor of the topping. This is due to rice's ability to absorb liquids.

Saving money on meals is easy: buy less expensive kinds of meat, simmer in seasoned liquid, and serve over rice.

CHICKEN PAPRIKA

- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 12 choice chicken pieces (about 3 pounds)
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 2 teaspoons paprika
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ¼ teaspoon garlic powder
- 1½ cups tomato juice
- 3 cups hot cooked rice
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- ½ cup sour cream
- 2 tablespoons flour

In hot fat in skillet, brown chicken on all sides. Add onions; saute until onions are tender. Add seasonings and tomato juice. Simmer covered, 30 minutes, or until fork tender. Toss rice with parsley; mound on a hot serving platter. Arrange chicken on rice. Blend sour cream and flour. Stir into liquid remaining in skillet. Cook until thickened, but do not boil; pour over chicken. Makes 6 servings.

Each serving provides: 386 calories.

STEAK MARENGO

- ⅓ cup flour
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ½ teaspoon seasoned pepper
- 1½ pounds chuck steak, cut in 1-inch pieces
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 large onion, sliced
- ½ cup dry sherry
- ½ cup beef broth
- 1 can (14½ to 16 oz.) tomatoes (drain, reserve juice, and chop)
- 1 bay leaf
- ½ cup sour cream
- 3 cups hot cooked rice

Blend flour, salt and pepper. Roll meat in flour mixture. Brown in oil. Add onions and cook 2 to 3 minutes longer. Add sherry, broth, reserved tomato juice, and bay leaf; stir to loosen brown particles. Cover and simmer about 45 minutes or until meat is tender. Stir in tomatoes and sour cream. Simmer 2 to 3 minutes longer. Serve with hot fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings.

Each serving provides: 435 calories.

CAJUN RED BEANS

- ½ pound dried pinto, kidney or pink beans
- 1 quart water
- ¼ pound salt pork, diced
- 1 cup chopped onions
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- ¼ teaspoon oregano
- ¼ teaspoon thyme
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
- ½ pound well-seasoned pork sausage meat, crumbled
- ½ cup sliced green onions with tops
- 3 cups hot cooked rice

Sort and wash beans. In a large saucepan combine beans, water and salt pork. Bring to a boil and boil 2 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand, covered, 1 hour. Return to heat and simmer 45 minutes. Add onions, green pepper, garlic, seasonings, and tomato sauce. Continue simmering, covered, 45 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in sausage and green onions; replace cover and cook 30 minutes longer or until beans and sausage are tender. Add boiling water if beans become dry while cooking. Serve beans with mounds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings.

Each serving provides: 574 calories.

Restaurant 'King' poultry meal root?

Over the years I have speculated several times about the origin of the dish called chicken a la king. Curiosity about the source has to do with a possible sea change that may have occurred when the dish arrived here, as I supposed, from France.

Numerous classic dishes in the French kitchen are listed on menus as "a la reine" or in the queen's style. Thus you find omelette a la reine or an omelette filled with creamed chicken, potage a la reine, a cream of chicken soup, and so on.

I recently received a small brochure from James N. Keen, a professional photographer in Louisville, Ky., that purports to tell the genesis of the name chicken a la king. Keen states that the brochure was given to him 40 years ago by one E. Clark King III whose father was a restaurateur.

"It was in the early 1900s that Chicken a la King was first served to the public," the brochure says. "My father was the proprietor of the Brighton Beach Hotel, a fashionable summer resort just outside of New York City.

"One night his head chef, George Greenwald, sent word he had concocted a dish he would like to serve my parents. It was enjoyed immensely and they asked for seconds, but only enough had been prepared for two individual portions. The next morning, the chef asked permission to place it on the menu. After learning of the various ingredients used, my father remarked that 'a fair price must be asked.'

"The next day the bill of fare carried the following:

If that was indeed the origin of the name, then here is the original recipe as detailed in the brochure:

"Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and then add one-half of a green pepper shredded and one cup of mushrooms sliced thin. Stir and cook five minutes and then add two level tablespoonfuls of flour and a half teaspoonful of salt. Cook until frothy and then add one pint of cream and stir until sauce thickens. Put this all in a double boiler, add three cups of chicken cut in pieces and let stand to get very hot. In the meantime, take a quarter of a cup of butter and beat into it the yolks of three eggs, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one tablespoonful of lemon juice and one-half teaspoonful of paprika. Stir this mixture until the eggs thicken a little; add a little sherry and finally shredded pimento before serving on toast."

Police Constable Trevor Lock has demonstrated the basic difference between the British and North American themes of law enforcement. He had a gun hidden inside his coat for the six days he was held hostage inside the Iranian Embassy but decided against using it. "He was overpowered during the initial assault by the gunmen and had not time to reach for his pistol hidden under his uniform," said a Scotland Yard spokesman. The terrorists "failed to find (Lock's) gun and he did not reveal that he had it," the spokesman said. "He kept it there the whole time." Police in London rarely carry weapons but Lock was armed because he was on diplomatic guard duty when five Iranian-Arab gunmen stormed the embassy. "Whether he would have used it or not eventually, it is difficult to say. As it happened, it was not needed."

Dear Abby:

My heart goes out to the heartbroken parents of a gay daughter. Thank you for recommending Parents of Gays. They have been a godsend to us and other parents who ask themselves, "Where have we gone wrong?"

My husband and I are very grateful that our gay daughter has found a warm and stable relationship with a person she loves and who loves her.

Her housemate is as welcome and accepted into our family as the man who married our other daughter. Because being gay has caused our daughter so much pain, I will be the first to admit I wish she were not gay, just as I wish my hair wasn't curly and my husband didn't smoke. But these are things I cannot change, so I have learned to live with them.

I hope the parents of that gay daughter will accept her and the girl she loves, and get on with living the rest of their lives.

Content Parent

Dear Parent:

Curly hair can be straightened and your husband can quit smoking if he really wants to, but in my opinion, the fundamental cause of homosexuality is biological — either genetic or hormonal. Otherwise, how can one account for the fact that homosexuals have brothers and sisters who are straight though raised in the same environment? However, it is possible for psychological factors to influence one's natural sexual preference after birth — but these factors also have "physical" roots.

Dear Abby:

I recently met a European-born gentleman (Hungarian) who, upon greeting a woman, always gently kisses her hand. I think this is a lovely gesture. Can you tell me where the custom of kissing a lady's hand originated, and the reason for it?

Annette

Dear Annette:

It originated in France. And although there is nothing in literature explaining the reason for it, I suppose a man has to start somewhere.

Dear Abby:

The other day you had a letter in your column from a woman who signed herself Pretty Feet. She said her husband was crazy about her feet and was really turned on by them. She wanted to know if maybe he was some kind of "nut."

You told her that he was no nut; he had a foot fetish, and it was nothing to worry about.

Well, Abby, you'll never know how much that explanation meant to me. You see, ever since I was a little kid, I'd get real excited over girls' feet. I never understood why. I used to feel ashamed when I'd ask a girl if I could kiss her foot. I'm sure a lot of girls thought I was weird.

I'm a grown man now, and I'd still rather hold a girl's foot than her hand. Thanks for printing that letter. It's a great relief to know I'm not alone.

Shower fare simple, sophisticated

Despite all that is written and said about today's young people and their contemporary lifestyles, many young men and women still look forward to traditional wedings with all the trimmings and celebration to launch them into their committment.

Often time the wedding is a family experience where much-missed friends and relatives gather for an all-too-seldom catching up on their personal milestones and histories.

Bridal showers, too, are alive and well — and while they have adapted to many more up-to-date living values, they are most always centred around food and refreshments of some sort.

Whether you're the mother of a bride-to-be or a close friend, here's a carefree bridal shower luncheon menu to help you entertain elegantly and easily.

Start with light and refreshing Spring Soup. Serve it hot or chilled, depending on your preference and the weather. The recipe is so easy, it can be prepared at the last minute. Just begin with an envelope of au jus gravy mix and tomato juice and stir in peas and herbs for the finishing touch.

As for the main course, highlight slices of ham with a cool, creamy, and delightful Pineapple Chiffon Mold. This delicately flavored molded salad is pretty enough for a centrepiece. Crushed pineapple, whipped cream, and small chunks of process cheese form the basis of this do-ahead salad. Prepared mustard gives the salad a subtle golden color and adds a perfect contrast to the ham.

Seedless white grapes and other fresh fruits not only add to the attractiveness of this platter but enhance the meat and salad.

Soup and mold are simple shower specialties

Serve with hot muffins which can be baked earlier and warmed just before serving.

Complete this lighthearted luncheon with chocolate eclairs or a decorated cake and you'll have a menu that's also light work for the hostess.

SPRING SOUP

2½ cups tomato juice
2 cups water
1 envelope (¾-oz.) Au Jus Gravy Mix
1 teaspoon sugar
½teaspoon Herb Seasoning or Basil Leaves
1 cup tiny frozen peas, thawed
1½ cups shredded iceberg lettuce
¼ cup snipped green onion tops.

Combine tomato juice, water, contents of gravy mix envelope, sugar, and herb seasoning in large saucepan; bring to a boil.

Reduce heat and simmer 15 minutes. Add peas and simmer 1 to 2 minutes. Just before serving stir in lettuce and onion. 6 servings.

PINEAPPLE CHIFFON MOLD

2 packages (3-oz. each) lemon flavor gelatin
1½ cups boiling water
1 can (19-oz.) crushed pineapple
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
1½ cups shredded cheddar cheese
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
Pineapple slices
Boiled ham slices
Fresh Grapes.

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Stir in undrained crushed pineapple and mustard. Chill until slightly thickened. Fold in cheese and whipped cream.

Pour into lightly oiled 6-cup mold; chill until firm. Unmold on serving plate and garnish with pineapple, ham slices, and small clusters of grapes. 6 servings.

Best chili is mixed with philosophy

By BARBARA HANSEN
The Los Angeles Times

Chili is not just a spicy dish. It also reflects one's personality, philosophy, ego, upbringing, mood, moral character, creativity, taste, etc.

The two styles of chili presented today are likely to cause especially hot reactions. With the risk of being branded sexist, we offer what might be called his and her chilis.

His chili is a pork and beef mixture so heavily spiced with chili powder, dried chiles, turmeric and cumin that it is beyond the scope of tender palates.

The contributor is Roy Brady of Northridge, Calif., a wine writer and cookery fan who once lived in Texas.

Brady adds no salt to his chili, feeling the mixture is seasoned enough. As for beans, he said, "Every true Texan adores the noble bean but recoils at the miscegenation of beans in chili. 'With,' by all means; 'in,' never. And no crackers, bread, noodles and such like."

Brady says his chili should be "neither very thick nor soupy, but a consistency where a lot will stick to a rolled tortilla."

Those who recoil at chili as pungent as Brady's will love Peggy's Easiest Chili, which was developed by Peggy Dunlap Houdek of Los Angeles.

Houdek, managing editor of Performing Arts magazine, devised the recipe while living in San Francisco and serves it frequently at parties.

When asked for the recipe, she almost refused. "It's so easy, it's embarrassing. It's hardly a recipe," she protested. However, Houdek did agree to reveal her formula, adding "I do have to admit that I always get tons of compliments on it."

Peggy's Easiest Chili is made with ground beef, onion, garlic and water. The rest of the ingredients are convenience foods. They are canned kidney beans (this is definitely not Texas chili), tomato sauce, green pepper flakes and chili con carne seasoning.

"I usually just dump in the chili seasoning until it's a nice brown color," said Houdek. The seasoning mixture includes garlic, cumin, coriander and oregano as well as ground chiles. According to the manufacturer, Spice Islands, it is based on a recipe originally used at the Brown Derby in Hollywood.

Houdek's chili is not only easy but adjustable. "The recipe can be doubled or tripled and it works just as well. If it gets too thick, just add more water," Houdek advised.

ROY BRADY'S TEXAS CHILI

Olive oil
2 pounds very lean ground beef
2 pounds lean ground pork
1¼ cups chili powder
4 to 6 tablespoons cumin
2 to 4 tablespoons turmeric
3 to 10 dried red New Mexico chiles, broken up
1 quart beef broth
2 cups canned tomato puree
10 cloves garlic, coarsely chopped
Salt, optional

Use just enough olive oil to coat a large, heavy skillet. Divide meat into 3 parts. Sear each over high heat, breaking up meat completely with a wire whisk. Cook only until meat is broken up. It should not brown. Transfer meat to cooking pot.

Mix chili powder, cumin, turmeric and dried chiles. Stir in broth, then add to meat. Add tomato puree and garlic. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer one hour, no longer. Mixture should be neither soupy in consistency nor extremely thick. If desired, season to taste with salt. Serve with hot corn tortillas. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

PEGGY'S EASIEST CHILI

1 pound ground beef
1 onion, chopped
3 cloves garlic, minced
2 (15 ounce) cans kidney beans
2 (8 ounce) cans tomato sauce
2 sauce cans water
¼ cup bottled chili con carne seasoning, or to taste
1 tablespoon green pepper flakes

Cook beef in a Dutch oven until almost browned. Then add onion and cook until tender. Add garlic, undrained kidney beans, tomato sauce, water, chili con carne seasoning and green pepper flakes. Cover and simmer 45 minutes or longer. Serve with chopped red onion and shredded sharp Cheddar cheese on the side. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Mysteries of aging studied worldwide

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

How to stop the process of aging is a problem that has intrigued doctors and scientists all over the world. Many ongoing studies indicate that there are definite ways by which the heart, lungs, brain, blood vessels and other organs can be saved from the ravages of time.

One such study being done in Russia is attracting particular attention. The Soviet scientists, under the direction of Dr. Alek Hper Mekhtiev, claim that they have successfully stopped the aging process and made a successful advance in human longevity.

Dr. Mekhtiev, Russia's leading expert on aging, has been using specially prepared serum from the human placenta in his present study. The group of patients being investigated maintain their ordinary lifestyle, with no change in diet or exercise habits.

This report, recently published in the excellent magazine, Geriatrics, indicates that "no aging has occurred among any of the patients and all are in perfect health. Moreover, blood pressure and sugar levels are back to normal, with improved blood flow to the brain. Sexual function is restored, memory and agility improved and eyesight strengthened. Their body resistance to common illnesses has been increased and their general outlook and enjoyment of life are well ahead of other people their age."

Scientific reaction to such exciting claims is, of course, guarded. Nevertheless, the conquest of the process of aging is theoretically possible. If man can avoid the anger, the violence and the threat of plagues and nuclear destruction, the day may yet come when longevity will be increased to 150 years and, along with it, will continue a quality of life that is even more important than longevity.

North America is learning how to reduce its death rate from heart attacks. Strangely, the greatest teacher is Finland, which has the highest death rate from heart attacks.

A massive study on Finnish subjects attributes the high rate of heart attacks to the greater consumption of beef fat, pork fat and butter fat. According to a recent study of 15,000 Finnish children, 5 to 13 years of age, their trouble starts in childhood.

The youngsters with the highest levels of blood cholesterol consumed the most cheese, beef and butter and the least bread cereals. Finnish experts in nutrition are now urging a radical alteration in their countrymen's diet.

This is similar to the recommendations made by the United States Surgeon-General that emphasizes lower fat intake and an increase in whole grain consumption.

Homemade biscuit mix is useful

A stock of homemade Biscuit Mix is a no-waste product of many uses. With a half dozen ideas for using it, written out and handy, it can be a real money saver at the same time it is a source of good nutrition.

Nearly every kind of product made from this Biscuit Mix can have either fresh fruit or fresh vegetables served with it to make complete nutritious light meals; or cheese, eggs, cooked meat or fish may be used as fillings.

With a double recipe quantity of today's listed ingredients of Basic Biscuit Mix, stored in rigid plastic containers, quickly prepared light lunches and summer suppers may be ready in minutes. Keep the mix frozen for occasional long term use. Or half of it may go into a Top-of-refrigerator freezer for one month; or on refrigerator shelf for two to three weeks. Always be sure the bag is tightly rolled down each time to exclude air, and is put back into the rigid container promptly after measuring out the quantity of mix required. Replace into refrigerator, or freezer, at once.

Cooking for one or two? Make up the quantity as printed today. Good to have on hand with holidays of early summer coming along.

Note: Label container with list of ingredients and date of storage.

When wanting cookies, pie toppings for fresh fruits, pancakes or muffins, it is easy to add a little sugar, a few cut-up dates, chopped nuts or raisins, or grated cheese and onion as in the Savory Cheese Bread.

BASIC BISCUIT MIX
500 mL wholewheat flour
375 mL unbleached flour
125 mL soy flour
125 mL wheat germ
30 mL baking powder
5 mL salt
250 mL skim milk powder
250 mL soft margarine

Measure and sift all flours into large mixing bowl. Add and stir-in remaining dry ingredients. Combine well with two large spoons.

Cut in margarine with two knives, making a fine crumby texture.

This is now ready to store in a clean plastic bag. Close with a tie after squeezing out all air. Store as suggested above according to how long you expect to be using the quantity made. The quantity is about 1.375 litres of mix. Use your metric measuring cup and spoons.

Savory Cheese Bread is a tasty hot bread for occasional use, flavored with a touch of onion and herbs. Don't overdo this, although you may obviously change the herbs to your own fancy.

SAVORY CHEESE BREAD
375 mL Basic Biscuit Mix (recipe above)
5 mL fine onion
.5 mL powdered thyme, fresh mint
1 small egg
125 mL vegetable cooking liquid
25 mL grated hard cheese
10 mL softened margarine

Measure Biscuit Mix into mixing bowl. Beat egg in smaller bowl; add onion, herbs, cooking liquid and hard cheese. Stir egg mixture into Biscuit Mix, and stir just until all is quite lumpy but mixed.

Spoon into greased pie plate, or a layer cake pan. Smooth top.

Dip fork into softened margarine and run lightly over surface. Repeat until all margarine is used. This makes a nice crusty top.

Bake in moderate oven 180 deg. C or a little higher for about 30 minutes or until a clean knife comes out clean and top is light brown.

Serve hot in wedges, split open and fill with mashed hard boiled egg and chopped green salad; or your choice of other savory fillings.

Satisfying Pancakes for 4 persons can be made in minutes with your own Biscuit Mix, thus:

PANCAKES FROM BISCUIT MIX
625 mL Basic Mix
75 mL water
2 small eggs

Add egg mixture to dry ingredients, mix briefly until you have a rather lumpy batter.

Melt a little margarine in frypan. Spoon out half the batter as 4 pancakes into the hot pan.

Choose your own fillings — applesauce with a sliver of cheese, chopped bacon, chopped date pieces, a spoonful of left over vegetables or a little fresh green salad.

In this way, waste is avoided of small amounts of food already prepared and stored in refrigerator for a day or two. Use it while still good, never if doubtful. Leftovers lose their poor reputation when used in a way that they are not recorded as leftovers.

Plain Scones or Currant Scones are other possibilities from this Basic Biscuit Mix, ideal during summer when unexpected drop-in travellers come.

Just add 25 mL sugar to 375 mL Basic Biscuit Mix, then add 1 egg to 125 mL water for mixing into a lumpy batter. Remember the milk powder is already part of the Mix, that is why we're adding water to the recipes, not milk.

Spoon Scone batter into a greased round layer cake pan and bake in moderate oven for about 30 minutes or until a clean knife comes out clean. This cuts into 8 or 10 Scones.

Add a few currants or raisins to the dry ingredients if fruit is wanted for variety.

To use this plain Scone with fresh berries (almost like a Shortcake) split wedges while hot from oven; spread with a little soft margarine and heap with slightly crushed fresh berries. Serve with forks and homemade low-fat plain yogurt.

A half dozen ideas from one recipe will be worth passing on to your visitors, and you'll benefit from enjoying goodies from one Basic Biscuit Mix that is made at home, of the ingredients you want.

Brunch in a nest

Family brunches are coming back into vogue again. The weekend affairs are often the only time the family gets together in a week crammed with busy work schedules and appointments. With more daylight hours for recreation together, a brunch before an outing is a pleasant activity.

It takes a bit of King Midas' magic to turn leftover ham into a brunch your whole family will enjoy.

This regal dish, Golden Eggs In A Nest, transforms hard cooked eggs and ham into a dish which would be just as welcome at breakfast, lunch or supper.

A rice and spinach mixture serves as a bed for stuffed egg halves. The eggs are filled with a zesty combination of chopped ham, prepared mustard, and the mashed yolks. Top with a flavorful sauce, easily made from an envelope of cheese sauce mix, to add the golden touch.

And, if you're looking for another timpting recipe for leftover ham, Baked Asparagus Italian-style is sure to delight your palate. This casserole of tender asparagus, teamed up with ham and tomatoes, is so easy to prepare. Worcestershire sauce and parmesan cheese add a scrumptious flavor accent to help put you in a spring-time mood.

GOLDEN EGGS IN A NEST

- 6 hard-cooked eggs, shelled and cut in half
- ½ cup finely chopped cooked ham
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- 4 teaspoons prepared mustard
- 1 package (10-oz.) frozen chopped spinach, thawed
- 3 cups cooked rice
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- 1 envelope (1¼-oz.) cheese sauce mix
- 1 cup milk

Remove yolks from eggs; mash. Combine with ham, mayonnaise, and 3 teaspoons mustard. Stuff each egg white with this mixture. Drain spinach well and mix with rice, lemon juice and butter. Spoon spinach mixture into 6 individual casseroles. Top each with 2 stuffed eggs. Prepare cheese sauce mix according to package directions using milk and stirring in remaining teaspoon of mustard. Spoon over casseroles. Bake in 350° oven 20 minutes or until piping hot. 6 servings.

BAKED ASPARAGUS ITALIAN-STYLE

- 1 pound fresh asparagus or two packages (10-oz. each) frozen asparagus, thawed
- ¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 to 1½ cups julienne strips of cooked ham
- ¼ cup chopped onion
- ¼ chopped celery
- 3 medium tomatoes, coarsely chopped
- ½ cup soft bread crumbs
- 1 to 2 tablespoons grated parmesan cheese

Place trimmed fresh or drained frozen asparagus spears in shallow baking dish. Combine butter and worcestershire sauce; brush about 1½ tablespoons on asparagus. Mound ham, onion, celery, and tomatoes in centre of casserole; drizzle with all but about 2 teaspoons butter mixture. Toss bread crumbs and parmesan with remaining 2 teaspoons butter and sprinkle on tomatoes. Bake, covered, in 375° oven 30 minutes. Uncover and bake another 15 minutes or until asparagus is tender. 4 servings.

This meal is mainly leftovers served up with a touch of magic

LOSE 5-14 LBS. IN NEXT TWO WEEKS WITH THE HELP OF THE no nonsense DIET

In May of 1979 Natures own no nonsense diet was introduced to British Columbians and Albertans through the Prince Health Food chain. Within weeks they were sold out and by the end of July thousands of people had lost weight the no nonsense way.

Unlike most diets to have come along this one is not dying out, but gaining greater momentum all the time. The reason for this phenomenal growth lies inthe fact that those people who have tried the diet have gotten positive results. For example I know of one particular young lady who has been overweight nearly all of her life. She wanted desperately to lose 25 lbs., and tried every possible means over the last two years. She exercised, joined clubs and went to monthly meetings. All to no avail. After reading about the no nonsense diet, she decided to give it a try before throwing in the towel. It worked. Within a month she lost 23 lbs., within two more weeks she lost another 10 lbs. She is so ecstatic about this diet that she preaches it to anyone who will listen and has most of her friends on it.

The product is a dieter's dream; two tablespoons in a glass of partially skimmed milk is equal in nutrition to a complete meal. But without all those nasty little calories. It has all the essential amino acids, and Vitamins and Minerals in a delicious powder base. The no nonsense formula comes in two flavours, luscious chocolate and tasty vanilla.

Vitamin A	Vitamin E	Vitamin C	Vitamin D
Thiamin	Riboflavin	Niacin B6, B12	Folid Acid Biotin
Choline	Calcium	Phosphorous	Iron
Iodine	Magnesium	Copper	Zinc
Potassium	Manganese	Sodium	d-Panothenic Acid

This is a wonderful diet because you are dealing with natural foods and not drugs, consequently it is safe and very healthy. A lot of people after going on this diet, have noticed remarkable improvement in their hair, skin and nails.

The no nonsense diet is available at these and other leading Retailers:

Mideast's mahleb made from cherry stones

question & answer

Q. I have an Armenian cookbook. One of the recipes calls for ground mahleb, which is described as a seed used for flavoring. Are you familiar with it?

A. Mahleb, also spelled mahlab, is a seasoning made from black cherry kernels or pits. It is used in Middle Eastern cookery as a flavoring for cakes and breads. It is available in shops that specialize in Middle Eastern foods.

Q. Many restaurants serve a delicious French dressing that is opaque, slightly white as though some egg has been added, and often with a slight mustard flavor. Cookbooks, including French cookbooks, invariably give oil and vinegar with various herbs as the ingredients for French dressing. I've tried dozens and none of them are opaque. Do you know of such a recipe?

A. You are right in your speculation that the dressing does contain egg yolk, but only a trace. If you use a great deal of the yolk, you are apt to wind up with a fairly thick mayonnaise. Try this in your salad bowl: Add one-quarter to one-half teaspoon egg yolk to the bowl (you may freeze the remaining yolk or keep it slightly covered for another salad the next day). Add two teaspoons imported mustard and a teaspoon of white wine vinegar. Add salt and pepper to taste. Start beating with a wire whisk and gradually add three tablespoons of olive oil. Taste the dressing. Add more oil, salt, pepper or mustard according to taste. If you want a lemon flavor, add a few drops of lemon juice.

Q. My husband often leaves half-bottles of beer lying around my house, and I sometimes use it in cooking. I make a carbonnade stew and a beer batter. I have heard of a beer soup. Is there such a thing?

A. Yes, but the samples that I have tasted are nothing I would recommend. It is said to be a German specialty consisting of a light beer thickened with potato flour. Flavored with lemon peel and various spices including cinnamon, it is sweetened with sugar and served with pieces of fried bread. It is served hot.

Q. I have a small house in Connecticut where my family and I spend weekends. A lot of times we have products in the refrigerator that won't keep from visit to visit, that is, if we are away for a month. What I have in mind are butter, milk and sour cream. Can these things be frozen?

A. Most but not all. I keep a supply of butter on hand in the freezer for those occasions when I may forget it while shopping. Milk also freezes well but sour cream does not. I cannot describe the chemical changes that it undergoes but, once frozen, it breaks up into curdlike particles and separates as though it were curdled.

Q. All my life I have heard from my British mother about a dessert called flummery. She never made it and was vague about how it was prepared. Do you know?

A. One British source states that it is an old dessert that is rarely made today. The same source states that it is made with oatmeal and cooked until gelatinous, at which point various ingredients can be added, including raisins, sugar, stewed fruit and almonds. On the other hand, I have eaten an English flummery that does not contain oatmeal but was rather a gelatin dessert with egg yolks, sugar, Sherry and brandy. There is also a Scottish flummery prepared like an English custard to which heavy cream, currants, Sherry and rose water are added.

'Original' cacciatore pure invention

By MIKE McGRADY

People who write cookbooks are always asked where they get their recipes. Often they will claim that they are family heirlooms, handed down from one generation to the next. Or that they are dramatic new version of golden oldies. Only occasionally will it be claimed that the dish is a pure invention. This is one of those occasions. That's right. I am the man who invented chicken cacciatore.

A word of explanation may be in order here. I invented chicken cacciatore in much the way Helmut Matuso invented the typewriter. Helmut, you may remember, spent 60 years in the Swiss Alps living as a recluse. During those long years as a hermit, Helmut was inventing a machine to make printing appear on a page. You would hit a button — say, the "A" button — on a keyboard and the same letter — "A", in this instance — would appear on a page of paper.

Making the components of handcarved wood and rubber bands, Helmut finally finished work on his "machine a ecrire" ("machine to write"). He carried it down to the main patent office in Zurich. Unfortunately, the year was 1974, and as he walked into the patent office, he heard the terrible clatter of electric typewriters. Helmut, incidentally, is back on his mountaintop, where he is working on a machine that plays music from revolving discs.

The full story of how I invented chicken cacciatore will follow. Here's how you can do it.

The Staples: Make sure these are all on hand: salt, pepper, flour, confectioners', sugar, olive oil, garlic, thyme, oregano, eggs.

The Shopping List: Two frying chickens (cut into serving pieces); two large onions; two green peppers; two cucumbers; one bunch parsley; one-half pound fresh mushrooms; fresh dill; sweet white grapes (two pounds); one small can tomato paste; one large can Italian plum tomatoes; one pound spaghetti; butter; one small sour cream; grated parmesan cheese (four ounces); one bottle dry red wine.

4:30 P.M.: Put half a cup of flour in a brown paper bag and add large pinches of salt and pepper. Shake the pieces of chicken in the bag.

Place a large, heavy frying pan over moderate heat. Add a chunk of butter and splash of olive oil. When the butter has melted, add the chicken and cook until the pieces are browned on all sides.

Remove chicken from skillet. Add more oil and butter. Chop the onions and put them in the pan. Next, the green peppers, also chopped. Two cloves of garlic, minced. A large pinch of oregano. Another of thyme. Salt and pepper. Stir.

When chopped onions are tender, add a cup of red wine. A small can of tomato paste. The large can of plum tomatoes.

5 P.M.: Add the chicken pieces to the pot and cover tightly. Cook over a low heat, checking every now and then to make sure the chicken isn't sticking.

5:30 P.M.: Rinse the grapes and break the large bunchs into small clumps. Beat together the whites of three eggs for just a couple of minutes, until they are thick but not stiff. Dip the grapes into the egg whites and dust them with powdered sugar. Keep cold until ready to serve.

5:55 P.M.: Rinse the mushrooms and cut away the tips of the stems. Add the mushrooms to the chicken for the final half-hour of cooking.

6 P.M.: Start a large pot of water boiling. For a pound of spaghetti — or any pasta — use between a gallon and six quarts of water. Add a small handful of salt and a tablespoon of oil to the water.

When water comes to a full boil — that should be in 20 minutes or so — add the pasta slowly, a small bit at a time, trying not to interrupt the boil. (Danger! Never cover a pasta pot — or you'll spend the next 10 minutes mopping up the stove.) Check for doneness in about eight minutes; the spaghetti should be chewy but never tough.

6:15 P.M.: The salad. Peel the cucumbers and slice them as thinly as possible. Add a dressing made up of half a container of sour cream, a large pinch of minced dill, a small shot of vinegar and a generous amount of salt and pepper.

6:30 P.M.: Check the chicken to make sure that it is cooked through. Serve it beside a generous helping of the spaghetti to which you have added butter, salt, pepper and the parmesan cheese. Serve the cucumbers on the side.

As you first bite into the chicken cacciatore, you may well wonder how such a marvelous dish was invented. Let me tell you how it came about. (Incidentally, you may find this an even simpler way of cooking the dish.) One day I found myself with a large quantity of left-over spaghetti sauce. As an experiment, I stewed some chicken in that left-over spaghetti sauce. A guest that evening smacked her lips and said, "My, this is a wonderful chicken cacciatore." And that is what I decided to call my new invention.

Sunbathers love it but farmers are wary

REGINA (CP) — It may be a sunbather's delight, but Saskatchewan's usual spring tightrope act, teetering on the verge of a drought, has the experts wary.

A light snowfall last winter and an early spring, with warm, sunny, dry days, is threatening headaches for farmers and those concerned about water supplies in the province.

The weather is also playing havoc with those fighting northern forest fires as high winds and low humidity add to their woes.

But to city residents lucky enough to have some time to spare, the hot sun is perfect for lazing away a day in the park or backyard.

"It's unusual, but I don't think we're hitting anything like extemes yet," said Rod Smith at the Regina weather office. "If it carries on, I suppose we'll be bumbing into that."

Smith said April's average temperature in Regina was a full six degrees above normal and while some rainfall was recorded in the month, it was little more than a trace.

The immediate future, about the next week, shows no sign of rain.

D. L. MacLeod, director of the environment department's hydrology branch, said he wasn't worried about the weather so far, just about what the next few weeks will offer.

"In general the water supplies are probably adequate to carry most communities on into the fall," said MacLeod. No municipal officials have come to the hydrology branch for help because they are afraid of a water shortage.

The level of recreational lakes too is satisfactory for now, he said.

"Everything seems to have been holding up pretty well. If we continue to get a dry summer, there will be much more evaporation than normal and that would take the lakes way down."

For the farmer, it's a two-edged sword. Henry Zilm, director of the agriculture department's statistics branch, said seeding was a full two weeks earlier than normal, and a month ahead of last year when spring was late.

What's needed now is rain, which Zilm said must come before the end of May or "we're in desparate trouble."

If there's no rain in the next 10 days, farmers will begin changing their seeding plans to adjust to the weather, perhaps delaying and risking losing a crop to frost in the fall.

What seed is being put in now will soon use up the moisture available in the ground and wither without rainfall. "I don't know that we've ever seen that happen on a mass scale," said Zilm.

Zilm also believes it is too early to worry, especially since farmers still have a number of options open, including what they plant, where and when.

It's not only Saskatchewan's grain farmers who face potential trouble. Cattlemen need rain for their pasture lands and for their hay crop or they will have no feed for next winter.

As if all that's not enough, Zilm said the spring has been perfect for a heavy hatch of grasshoppers.

Direct flights to Edmonton

Air Canada will begin direct service between Victoria and Edmonton starting June 7.

Victoria manager Glen Steeves said a Boeing 727 capable of carrying 132 passengers will leave Victoria airport at 7:05 a.m. daily and arrive in the Alberta capital at 9:30 local time.

Return flights will leave Edmonton at 7:40 p.m. and arrive in Victoria at 8:10 p.m. There is a one-hour time difference between the two provinces.

Age really golden

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government is buying enough gold to provide 75th anniversary medallions for all people born in the province at least 75 years ago who want one, Government Services Minister Stu McCrae says.

But he was unable to tell the legislature how much gold will be bought to supplement original supplies or how many medallions will be minted.

'Water holes' out

WINNIPEG (CP) — It is illegal to consume alcohol in mobile homes used just a few hours a day as "watering holes," the Manitoba Court of Appeal has ruled.

In a unanimous decision, the court overturned the acquittals of 10 people charged in August, 1978, of having liquor in places other than their residences.

Both provincial and county court judges had ruled the motor homes in which they had been drinking outside Winnipeg Stadium were residences according to the Manitoba Liquor Act.

Evacuees suing

SASKATOON (CP) — A Saskatoon family which says formaldehyde fumes from foam insulation forced it to leave its home has filed suit against the manufacturer and installer of the product.

Dennis Demeria and his family are seeking damages from Insul-Cote Industries Ltd., the Saskatoon company which installed the urea formaldehyde foam insulation. The family is also seeking damages from the Borden Company Ltd., an insulation manufacturer.

In the statement of claim filed in Court of Queen's Bench, the Demerias say formaldehyde fumes caused respiratory illnesses, abdominal pain, rashes and swelling of lymph nodes.

'Roots' bill eyed

Notley's bill, which he also introduced last year, would allow adopted children to obtain information about their natural parents from birth registration documents and orders of adoption.

Parents now know daughter won't regain life

TORONTO (CP) — A couple's dream of seeing their dead daughter brought back to life by a controversial process has been shattered before the experiment could even be tried.

Eight-year-old Genevieve de la Poterie died of cancer in a Los Angeles hospital on Jan. 25, 1972. Her parents had decided that when their daughter died they would have her placed in cryonic suspension — better known as deep freezing.

When a cure for Genevieve's disease was found, her parents believed she could be brought back to life.

In an interview a week after Genevieve's death, her father, Guy, explained why he decided to go ahead with the process.

"I never wanted my daughter to die because I loved her and she was very, very beautiful," he said in Montreal, where the family was living at the time of the death.

But the de la Poteries will never know whether the controversial process, discounted by many scientists as nothing more than science fiction, might have worked.

About two years ago, de la Poterie was told by the company which placed his daughter in suspension, the Cryonics Society of California, that the capsule Genevieve was sharing with another body needed repair.

He agreed to have the body transferred to a new and better metal casket, but he said in an interview the transfer was never done.

He flew to Los Angeles on March, 25, 1979. After visiting the crypt where his daughter was kept, he saw that maintenance had not been kept up. Much of the liquid nitrogen, the main element in the preservation process, had evaporated.

De la Poterie decided the experiment was over. Any chance cryonics had of working now were impossible, he thought. He took his daughter's body and buried it in a Los Angeles cemetery, ending any hopes he and his wife had of allowing their daughter to live again.

The family became interested in cryonics when they learned Genevieve had incurable cancer that affected her bowels and kidneys. De la Poterie read about the process in the 1964 best-seller by Robert Ettinger called The Prospect of Immortality.

He contacted Ettinger, a physics professor who championed the case of body-freezing, who directed him to the cryonics society in Los Angeles. Officials with the society suggested de la Poterie, his wife, Pierrette, and Genevieve live in Los Angeles so the process could be started immediately upon the child's death.

Within seconds of her death the process started. After three hours of soaking her body in different ice baths and having a solution of dimethyl sulfoxide pumped into her arterial system, Genevieve's body temperature was cooled to -200 degrees C, the temperature of liquid nitrogen. It was then placed in a cryogenic vacuum bottle and stored in an underground vault at a Los Angeles cemetery.

In the interview conducted a week after Genevieve was placed in her "time capsule," de la Poterie said a cure for cancer would be found within 10 years and some day he would see his daughter "ski, run, jump, resume her piano and ballet lessons."

"The soul is in the brain cells," he said eight years ago. "And if these cells are brought back to life, the body will live as it did before."

But the utmost in the father's plan was that his daughter's capsule would be maintained. After quietly burying his daughter seven years after her death, de la Poterie is reluctant to talk about the experience which he says cost him from between $5,000 to $10,000. But suprisingly, he says that given the chance, he'd do it all over again.

"I still believe that, if conducted properly, there's a chance cryonics could work," he said.

De la Poterie, who has two other children, says he never wants to be involved with the Cryonic Society of California or its founder, Robert Nelson. The society now is defunct, and Nelson faces a $10 million lawsuit from three families in the U.S. who say they lost tens of thousands of dollars by having their loved ones frozen.

CLC resolutions lash out at government, business

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress adopted an economic policy Tuesday which says the country needs an industrial strategy that puts jobs first and tightens government reins on corporations.

The document, which contains sharp criticism of governments and corporations on grounds they have been increasingly attacking unions and eroding personal income, was endorsed by most of the 2,500 delegates to the CLC's national convention.

"Every single economic issue must be examined in terms of its contribution to permanent job creation," says the document, entitled The Battle of the Eighties: Trade Union Rights vs. Corporate Power.

It cites high interest rates, inflation and unemployment as signs the economy is in a crisis and says anti-union business seminars, back-to-work legislation and related measures are part of a corporate dictatorship that labor must fight.

The industrial strategy would establish a Canadian Full Employment Act, establishing region-by-region full employment targets, setting unemployment rates at which government job creation funds would be automatically spent and declaring the right to a job as a basic human right.

It proposes a series of controls on corporations to protect jobs, including a mandatory one-year advance notice of major layoffs and plant closures. A company would have to justify such steps before a public tribunal and reach an agreement with the union on compensation for retraining, relocation and severance pay.

Bob White, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers union, told reporters such a law would go a long way toward alleviating social hardships faced by employees in the layoff-plagued auto industry.

"You can't treat workers with contempt," White said. He noted that labor law in Ontario, where thousands of auto workers are being laid off, provides for 16 weeks notice of a plant closure but said this recently was waived by the provincial government for American Motors.

The industrial strategy proposes forcing corporations to deposit 15 per cent of their pre-tax profits in a central job creation investment fund, to release more information to the public about their financing, pricing and production policies and to give employees more control over pension funds.

It says the foreign investment review agency should be strengthened, fewer raw resources should be exported for processing, more Canadian-made products should be bought by governments even if they cost more than imports, and trade and tax policy should be geared more to job creation and protection.

The proposal says a long-term manpower policy should be developed jointly by governments, unions, business and schools.

Gals support stripper

WINNIPEG (CP) — Mary Johnson, a 25-year-old stripper, said she was surprised when a room full of women's rights supporters at the Canadian Labor Congress convention burst into applause at her appeal for her union.

"I was afraid they would consider that what we do is sexist when in fact it's our livelihood," she said Tuesday after the spontaneous show of union support.

Ms. Johnson, president of the CLC-affiliated Toronto local of the Canadian Association of Burlesque Entertainers, was attending her first union convention and made her pitch for solidarity at a forum on equal opportunity.

She was almost apologetic, saying she hoped fellow union members would not be prejudiced against persons in her field of work. Male strippers are paid higher wages than female strippers, she said.

Ms. Johnson told reporters that a male stripper in Toronto earns an average of between $25 and $100 per show compared to $10 to $50 for women.

Pair killed

RANCHO PALOS VERDES, Calif. (AP) — A 31-year-old flying instructor and a 34-year-old prospective student were killed when the two-seat helicopter in which they were riding crashed into an open field.

Tories take 2 Grits 1 in N.S.

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia's Progressive Conservative government fattened its majority in the legislature Tuesday by winning two of three provincial byelections, but the afterglow of victory was dimmed by the near-miss of its heavyweight candidate in Halifax Needham.

Halifax Mayor Edmund Morris, a former broadcaster and one-time Conservative MP, was quietly reflective Tuesday night as the Needham vote was counted and he failed to build up the big majority that had been predicted.

But by the end of the night he was jokingly referring to himself as "Landslide Morris" after his 28-vote squeaker over Liberal Dan Clarke. The Tories also won Victoria riding, giving John Buchanan's government 33 of the legislature's 52 seats.

The Victoria win by R. Fisher Hudson gave the government its first seat in Cape Breton. The Tories also went to the wire in Richmond, a traditional Liberal seat in southern Cape Breton.

The results leave the Liberals, who Buchanan knocked out of office in 1978 after eight years in government, with 15 seats. There are four NDP members. Going into the byelections, the Tories had 31, the Liberals 14 and the NDP four.

McDonald witness shoots self

TORONTO (CP) — RCMP Inspector James Worrell, who testified late last month before the McDonald commission, shot and killed himself in his Winnipeg home on Saturday, police officials said.

Worrell testified April 29 at the commission inquiry into RCMP wrongdoing about his handling of undercover agent Warren Hart, 51, a U.S. citizen recruited by the Mounties in 1971 to infiltrate black radical groups in Canada.

Worrell, 50, was the man largely responsible for firing Hart in 1975.

He was the second member of the RCMP security service to commit suicide in the last month.

Skilled worker shortage

VANCOUVER (CP) — There will be a shortage of up to 500,000 skilled workers in Canada during the next five years, Employment and Immigration Minister Lloyd Axworthy told a Vancouver newspaper Tuesday.

Axworthy said Canada will have no choice but to import some skilled workers.

"Announcements will be coming soon on programs our government plans to implement for on-the-job training and job creation we hope will benefit underemployed segments of the work force — women, native people and the young, particularly," he said.

Axworthy said plans are not complete but added the programs would blend new immigration figures he will table this fall with domestic retraining.

Bikers win police suit

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Members of the Henchmen motorcycle club have been awarded settlements totalling $20,539 as a result of two civil actions against fired Waterloo police chief Sydney Brown and four police officers.

One action for $18,539 was the result of a police raid in March, 1978, after which 17 bikers and friends charged police with assault, false imprisonment and trespassing.

Brown and four tactical squad members were demoted after the raid.

Report defends patient's right to die

OTTAWA (CP) — The Criminal Code should be changed to spell out clearly a patient's right to refuse medical treatment, even under risk of death, says the Law Reform Commission.

In a working paper made public Tuesday, the commission says a patient should be able to make his or her own decision about receiving medical treatment — as long as the patient is capable of understanding the consequences of the decision, a spokesman said.

However, if the patient is past that point and an emergency confronts the doctor, treatment should be given to preserve life.

The working paper is part of a series of articles on medical treatment and the law published recently by the commission. Other topics include brain death, abortion and sterilization.

The commission is seeking public comment on its four-part series before it publishes a report to Parliament on these issues.

The impact of criminal law on medical treatment is largely overlooked in the Canadian context, the paper states. Yet the lack of prosecution in this area doesn't mean there are no urgent reasons for an examination of the present system.

The commission says the paper attempts to show that criminal law does not accurately reflect either the expectations of people who seek and receive medical treatment, or the assurances of a reasonable amount of immunity which medical professionals desire before undertaking treatment.

Medical treatment continues to be regulated by the Criminal Code, the paper recommends. But it should be set aside from other acts in the Code which are considered criminal.

The administration of medical treatment by qualified personnel, although technically an invasion of privacy, differs from other "intrusive" acts in that its intention is not criminal, the paper says.

"Let's tidy that up and make it clearer," the commission spokesman said in an interview Monday night.

"Right now it's invasion of privacy or assault . . . until and unless a patient consents," he said.

"Let's turn it around and make it essentially a good act but potentially dangerous if it doesn't meet certain conditions."

That means that doctors still would have to ensure the treatment is done for the benefit of the patient.

But individual rights would be protected by recognizing that patients have a right to refuse treatment.

The commission would also like to see the Criminal Code recognize the general duty, specifically of doctors, to help people in danger.

Doctors now may be reluctant to help a victim they come across seeking assistance for fear of lawsuits or charges against him if something goes wrong, the spokesman said.

Lalonde rules out move to world oil prices

TORONTO (CP) — It would be blatantly irresponsible for Canada to move now to world prices for crude oil and the federal government refuses to do it, Energy Minister Marc Lalonde said Tuesday night.

Saying that Alberta is entitled to a fair return for its crude oil resources, he added that moving to world prices — now about $22 a barrel more than the Canadian price of $14.75 — would inflict a totally unreasonable and unnecessary burden on Canadian business and households.

"That we refuse to do," he told the annual finance meeting of the Conference Board in Canada.

Lalonde flies next week to Edmonton for meetings with Alberta officials about a new pricing agreement.

The minister told his Toronto audience that the federal government will fully defend the principle of a free flow of goods and services — including crude oil — between the Canadian provinces.

Referring to recent oil marketing arrangements announced by Alberta, he said they could be interpreted in such a way as to interrupt or reduce the flow of crude oil to an Ontario petrochemical facility — the Petrosar plant in Sarnia, Ont.

On prices, Lalonde said Alberta is entitled to a fair return for crude oil and the federal government does not intend to sting the producing province's income.

It wants to develop a pricing system "that will accommodate Alberta's revenue aspirations without severe and perhaps irreparable damage to the rest of Canada, or even to the federation itself."

He rejected oil industry statements that it needs sharply higher prices to finance costly exploration and development projects, saying an increase of $2 a barrel is "clearly sufficient" to justify such ventures at this time.

Lalonde said arguing that Canada should pay anything to ensure a supply of oil is a fundamental misunderstanding of the situation. The heart of the issue was to strike a Canadian price that was fair and reasonable for all.

International prices had more than doubled in the last two years because consumers and oil companies were afraid of possible shortages.

"What emerged was a chaotic market ruled by fear. This artificial demand put enormous pressure on supplies, and inevitably escalated prices in the spot market."

Arguing that Canada should move immediately to world oil prices is saying in effect that it should fall willy-nilly into step with the disordered international market, Lalonde said.

Lalonde said there are two basic principles about oil prices.

First was that the Canadian price should reflect in some direct way the costs of acquiring it. That was why the federal government wanted a blended price incorporating the cost of imported oil as well as of domestic production from conventional wells, the oil sands and Arctic or offshore finds.

Secondly, the revenue-sharing system had to be altered to ensure that the federal government had sufficient revenue to allow it to carry out its responsibilities of economic stabilization and revenue equalization across the country.

"The non-energy sector will be damaged by higher energy prices. Moreover, there will under present arrangements be a sharp and disturbing increase in the regional income disparities which we in Canada have all struggled so long to reduce.

Alberta sets forest fire record

The Canadian Press

Fires have raged through more than 500,000 acres (200,200 hectares) of Alberta forest so far this year, which compares with the 400,000 acres burned during all of last year.

The largest, a blaze 190 kilometres north of Fort McMurray, grew to 326,000 acres Tuesday, making it the largest in Alberta history. The previous record was 321,000 acres burned in 1968 in the Slave Lake area of northeastern Alberta.

The fire now is being controlled on the Alberta side, however, said Murray Doherty, an Athabasca forest protection technician.

More than 210 men, aided by 11 helicopters, have contained the fire on the south and west sides and the fire has run into Lake Athabasca on the north, he said.

The fire season did not even begin until mid-April but the Alberta Forest Service has already exceeded its $1.75 million budget fighting 446 fires and is expected to approach cabinet for more money.

There were 48 fires burning in the province Tuesday, three of which were out of control.

McKinnon gets doublecrossed

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative MPs were walking around Parliament with their noses slightly out of joint Tuesday after Speaker Jeanne Sauve made a decision that robbed them off a bit of glory.

In what was a symptom of some Conservative discontent over the new Commons Speaker, there was a minor furore after Mme. Sauve recognized a Liberal MP to move a motion of urgent and pressing necessity.

That motion won easy unanimous consent because it offered non-partisan praise to the British government and its team of commandos for their "courageous stand against terrorism" in ending a six-day seige by gumnen at the Iranian Embassy in London on Monday.

As it turned out, Conservative MP Allan McKinnon, the former defence minister, had prepared a similar motion and asked the Liberal MP, Peter Lang of Kitchener, Ont., to second the motion.

Mme. Sauve recognized Lang first, however, and McKinnon was relegated to seconder for the motion, prompting several Conservative MPs to complain privately they were double-crossed.

Levesque, in a written statement issued by his Montreal campaign headquarters, said he looks "favorably" on a proposal to debate Trudeau on CFCF, the English-language affiliate of the CTV network in Montreal, and has instructed his staff to start negotiations with the station.

He said his staff will also check with French-language networks to discuss the possibility of a French-language debate with Trudeau.

Gov't support programs hidden part of food bill

By ROD EDWARDS

Besides the charges rung up on the supermarket cash register, consumers are paying a hidden food bill that amounts to millions of dollars a year.

The hidden costs are federal tax dollars used to maintain a viable agricultural industry with subsidies, commodity support programs and a variety of other farm policies and services.

A number of federal departments spend millions of dollars every year to support the agricultural sector and thereby keep down food costs.

Farmers make no apologies for taking the assistance, says an official of the National Farmers Union.

"In many cases, subsidies to farmers could be considered subsidies to the consumers," Stuart Thiesson of Saskatoon, NFU executive secretary, said in an interview.

"In any case, I don't think subsidies to agriculture are nearly as great as they are to many other industries which can pass costs on to the consumer. Farmers don't have that ability."

Probably the greatest percentage of government assistance is in grain transportation, an area vital to moving products from the farm to market place.

In the last eight years, about $1.63 billion has been poured into such projects as railway branch line rehabilitation, branch line operating subsidies and railway cars needed to carry grain.

Rebuilding and repairing branch lines is costing between $70 and $80 million a year. Prairie branch line subsidies required to keep open lines that wouldn't otherwise be maintained cost $60 million a year.

Another $258 million has been spent in the last number of years to purchase 8,000 government-owned grain hopper cars and repair older boxcars used in the grain fleet.

The government now is receiving the first of 2,000 additional hopper cars through a leasing program that will cost $10 to $12 million each year.

A few of the other major assistance programs in agriculture:

—FARM CREDIT CORP.

Outstanding loans now total $1.47 billion with Saskatchewan farmers owing $715 million, Alberta farmers $520 million and Manitoba farmers $240 million.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan recently estimated that for each percentage point difference between the FCC interest rate of 13 per cent and the bank rate, the government's cost is $5 million.

With the prime lending rate now at about 18 per cent, the government is paying $25 million in interest subsidies.

—CROP INSURANCE

Generally, the producer and federal government split the premium costs of crop insurance and the respective provinces pay for administration.

—WESTERN GRAIN STABILIZATION ACT

The program was established in 1976 to offset sharp drops in cash flow from grain sales. The federal government contributes $2 for every $1 put into the fund by farmers up to certain maximums.

In 1979, the federal government put $77.2 million into the fund with farmers contributing $38.6 million. Interest on the account was $9.2 million which accrued to the fund.

—AGRICULTURAL STABILIZATION ACT

Commodities eligible for price support under the act include oats and barley grown outside the Canadian wheat board designated area, corn, soybeans, hogs, slaughter cattle, sheep, industrial milk and cream.

Whenever payments are to be made, the money comes directly from the federal treasury. Actuarially, the act costs between $40 million and $50 million a year.

—ADVANCE PAYMENTS

The interest-free payments are offered farmers needing cash flow, particularly just after harvest and before crops can be sold.

As of March 7, there was a total of $41 million in outstanding loans.

In the 1979-1980 fiscal year, the total cost to government for interest and defaults was $6.4 million. Since 1957-1958, the total of interest and defaults has cost the government $75 million.

—GRAINS AND OILSEEDS VOTES

These government orders cover a variety of grants and contributions that totalled $16.3 million in the 1979-1980 fiscal year under the department of industry, trade and commerce.

The programs include the rapeseed utilization assistance policy, a protein oil and starch experimental project in Saskatoon, the Canada Grains Council grant, a rapeseed transportation subsidy that costs $3 million, and other costs incurred under credit agreements with foreign customers.

—DAIRY PROGRAM

For industrial milk and cream producers, the government pays a subsidy of $2.66 a hundredweight on 100 hundredweights for a total of $266 million year.

In addition, a subsidy of $1.33 a hundredweight is paid for exports. That cost $4 million last year.

Another $19 million was spent for operating costs of the Canadian Dairy Commission and covered research, storage interest and handling costs.

—CANADIAN EXPORT DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

The agency spends about $10 million a year to buy commodities from farmers for gifts to less developed countries.

—AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH

The federal government spent $128 million last year to operate research facilities across the country.

—MIGRATORY WATERFOWL DEPREDATION

Compensation to farmers for damage done to crops by migratory waterfowl varies from between $5 million and $10 million a year.

—OTHERS

There are many other areas where the federal government spends or plans to spend to assist agriculture, such as port development at Prince Rupert, B. C., Eastern grain transfer elevators, Great Lakes shipping subsidies, and the St. Lawrence Seaway costs.

But farmers are not the only segment of society that receives large amounts of financial assistance and subsidies that support what many view as a "cheap food policy."

The government in 1979 paid out $282 million in subsidies for air traffic, $287 million for Via Rail and $153 million for government ferries, to name a few.

Queen Beatrix honors Canada's war dead

GROESBEEK (Reuter) — Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands today laid a wreath at the Canadian war graves cemetery to commemorate those who died in the liberation of Holland 35 years ago.

Some 3,000 of the 5,700 Canadian troops who died in the Netherlands during the Second World War are buried at the cemetery, near Nijmegen.

Thousands of people, including 350 Canadian war veterans here on a week-long visit as guests of the city of Amsterdam, took part in the ceremony. Speeches were made by Dutch Prime Minister Andreas van Agt, Canadian Veterans Affairs Minister Daniel MacDonald and the Canadian ambassador to the Netherlands, Georges Blouin.

Wreaths were also laid by Queen Beatrix' mother and father, Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard, van Agt and the lieutenant-governor of the province of British Columbia, Brig. Henry Bell-Irving who, in May 1945, was the commanding officer of the Canadian troops entering the Dutch capital.

Games' ceremonies muted

MOSCOW (UPI) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, won agreement from President Leonid I. Brezhnev Wednesday to eliminate national anthems and flags from the Moscow Olympics in an attempt to prevent a widespread boycott, Soviet sources said.

Killanin and Monique Berlioux, director of the IOC, slipped into Moscow unannounced and met Brezhnev in the Kremlin to discuss ways of averting a boycott that could turn the July games into a farce.

A statement issued at the IOC's Swiss headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland, said "a frank discussion" took place.

The changes in Olympic ceremonies were initially agreed by Soviet organizers April 21-23 in Lausanne.

But Soviet sources said Brezhnev's personal agreement and the fact he met Killanin emphasized the seriousness with which the Soviet Union viewed the boycott threat.

Olympic leaders hope the agreement to scale down the opening and closing ceremonies, intended to take as much nationalism and politics as possible out of the Games, will persuade undecided Western nations not to join the U.S.-led boycott in protest against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Already the move has met French objections, meaning a team from France probably will go to Moscow.

Killanin also plans to hold talks with President Carter, but both the IOC and the White House say no date has been set.

IOC sources said Killanin expected to find it more difficult to change Carter's mind about boycotting the Olympics than it was to obtain the concessions from Brezhnev.

Carter announced in February that the United States would boycott the games and several other major sports nations — among them Britain, West Germany, Australia and Japan — have urged their National Olympic Committees to keep athletes at home.

The first crucial meeting will be May 13 when the French NOC will announce its decision. Claude Collard, its president, said the French government had removed its objections to a French team going as a result of the move to drop national flags and anthems, making a French presence at the Moscow Olympics now "almost certain.

The key meeting, however, will be May 15 when West Germany's NOC will pronounce.

Chlorine gas leak

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Five members of a tugboat crew remained in hospital Tuesday after inhaling toxic chlorine gas that leaked at a chemical plant, officials said.

The five were in stable condition and under observation at Tacoma General Hospital, a nursing supervisor said. At least 10 others were treated and released.

The tug, the Catherine Foss, was enveloped in a cloud of the gas Monday night on the Hylebos Waterway at the Pennwalt Corp., officials said.

The chemical company was loading the liquefied gas on a barge owned by Seaspan International Ltd. of Vancouver. A seal broke on a pressure valve on the barge and about 180 kilograms of the chemical escaped, according to police and fire department spokesmen.

Police blocked streets in the industrial tideflat area after the accident, but it was reopened to traffic within two hours after the cloud of gas dissipated.

Police battle NATO rioters

BREMEN, West Germany (Reuter) — Police fought thousands of demonstrators who set fire to vehicles Tuesday night and tried to storm into a military swearing-in ceremony marking 25 years of West German membership in NATO.

A police spokesman said one soldier was critically burned when demonstrators threw a fire bomb into a military bus. They also set two other buses and a number of cars ablaze.

He said at least 20 people, including policemen, soldiers and some of the 7,000 demonstrators, were hurt in the fighting in front of Weser soccer stadium, where the ceremony was held.

Civilian and military police barricaded the main gate to stop demonstrators who tried to force their way in. Others scuffled with a small group who managed to get in earlier.

The demonstrators inside the stadium chanted "Out of NATO!" and shouted "Stop it!" as the national anthem was played.

Demoted to ear admiral?

—VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A U.S. Navy hospital corpsman was convicted of assault Tuesday and was reduced in rank and ordered to forfeit $200 in pay for sewing a rowdy sailor's ear to a bed at a military clinic.

A second enlisted man charged in the April 12 incident at the navy's Boone Clinic was acquitted.

In addition, disciplinary action was recommended against against the victim, who claimed he was strapped to a bed, that gauze was stuffed in his mouth, that he was beaten with fists and that his left ear was stitched to the bed.

Looped shelters dropped

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Defence Department said Tuesday it has abandoned the planned "race track" deployment of the MX missile system in the southwestern United States and will opt for a stretched-out "linear" version to save money and land.

"If you wish to say the race track is dead, then go ahead," Defence Secretary Harold Brown told the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Military Construction.

The "race track" mode would have linked 26 shelters in a $33 billion looped system with single missiles shuttled around by a huge transporter in a shell game concealment method so that the Soviets would have to hit all 26 shelters to ensure destruction.

Charges dropped

NEW DELHI (AP) — Riot, assault, armed robbery and attempted murder charges against Sanjay Gandhi, 32, the politically powerful son of Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, were dropped Tuesday by a magistrate.

The prosecution said pursuing the case "would not be in the public interest."

Mystery body arrives in U.S.

Times News Services

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — While flags flew at half mast for eight Americans killed in an abortive rescue attempt in Iran, officials were investigating the possibility that the body in a ninth coffin may be that of an an Iranian civilian, sources said.

The coffins arrived here Tuesday from Switzerland to a salute from a 20-man color guard. Today, officials were working to identify the charred bodies of the servicemen who died in the April 25 mission.

U.S. officials have said eight Americans were killed in the failed attempt to rescue the 50 hostages from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. But the Iranians have said that nine or 10 bodies were recovered after a helicopter and transport plane collided in a ball of flame.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capudji of the Melkite Eastern Rite, who escorted the bodies from Tehran to Zurich and turned them over to U.S. officials, said Iranian authorities told him the nine coffins he was escorting contained nine bodies. But Capudji said some coffins contained only bone fragments or charred body parts.

He said that to his knowledge only three bodies could be identified — the rest were beyond identification.

State department officials declined comment.

Maj.-Gen. Robert Haebel of the U.S. Marine Corps and air force Gen. W. L. Creech, read a proclamation by President Carter that said the dead were "valiant men" whose names "will forever stand among those of heroes."

A national memorial service will be held in Washington on Friday.

Meanwhile, Iran has offered the Palestine Liberation Organization $50 million and large supplies of arms, PLO leader Yasser Arafat said in an interview published today.

Arafat told a correspondent of the Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Rai Al-Aam in Baghdad, when the Palestlinian leader made a brief visit Tuesday, that the PLO has not decided whether to accept the offer. The PLO already receives sufficient aid from Arab countries, he said.

In Tehran, amember of Iran's Revolutionary Council said today the Islamic regime was facing "certain danger" because a suffering economy had divided the populace into the well-fed and the hungry.

Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, secretary of the Revolutionary Council, made no mention of Western economic sanctions imposed against Iran for the continued holding of the American hostages, entering their 186th day of captivity.

In a speech broadcast by Tehran Radio, Beheshti called for "an equal per-capita distribution of all welfare in this country" to establish an Islamic brand of socialism.

"Our Islamic revolution is facing certain danger as a result of the economic relations existing in our society," he said. "Nearly 15 months have passed since the victory of the revolution but still the well-fed and the very well-fed can be seen alongside the hungry and very hungry."

"I have repeatedly told the Revolutionary Council thatdeprivation in this country is unacceptable," Beheshti said, "but our success here has been extremely meager."

Beheshti, who is President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's arch-rival, also heads the clerical Islamic Republican Party and his remarks appeared directed at a final round of elections set for Friday to select Iran's parliament.

Ayatollah Khomeini has said that the parliament will decide the fate of the American hostages, who, their militant captors claim, have been dispersed to 11 cities around the country to thwart another U.S. rescue bid.

Scientists battle over whether apes can use language

NEW YORK (AP) — A battle over whether apes are capable of using language erupted at a scientific meeting here Tuesday, with ape-language researchers accusing their critics of conducting a witch hunt.

The New York Academy of Sciences is holding a two-day conference that deals, among other things, with whether recent experiments show that chimpanzees can learn a simple language.

Duane Rumbaugh of Georgia State University and Sue Savage-Rumbaugh of a primate research centre in Atlanta have trained chimps to communicate with humans and other apes by abstract word-like symbols on a computer keyboard.

Allen and Beatrice Gardner of the University of Nebraska taught a chimpanzee named Washoe to use sign language some years ago.

But critics, including Herbert Terrace of Columbia University, who spent four years teaching sign language to a chimp named Nim, and Thomas Sebeok of Indiana University, contend the ape-language experiments are contaminated by something called the "Clever Hans effect."

Clever Hans was a horse in Germany at the turn of the century, famous for apparently doing simple sums by stamping its forefoot to count out the answer.

Later it came out Hans' trainer unwittingly gave Hans subtle cues as to when to stop counting. The Clever Hans effect has come to mean shaping any animal's actions by inadvertent prompting.

Terrace told the academy Tuesday that in his work with Nim, he at first believed the chimp was making sentences but later decided Nim only repeated "stereotyped sequences" prompted by his trainers. Terrace said the same was true of Washoe.

Rumbaugh said: "Broad, blatant integration of Clever Hans into every ape-language experiment smacks of a witch hunt." He said his experiments with two chimps, Sherman and Austin, show they can communicate with one another by computer language without human observers.

That shows apes are capable of using symbols to represent objects that are not present, Rumbaugh said, a key language ability.

At the core of the debate is how to interpret such constructions as "Please machine give apple," used by Rumbaugh's chimp Lana. The message, punched onto a computer terminal, prompts the computer to give Lana an apple.

Claudia Thompson and Russell Church of Brown University recently devised a computer program that accounts for about 80 per cent of such "sentences" uttered by Lana. They said in a recent article in Science that the first three words of such statements are invariable, the only thing that changes being the desired object "apple."

Terrace said the chimp does not understand the other words in the sentence, but only repeats them by rote.

LISBON (UPI) — Brandishing an unloaded gun, a Portuguese teen-ager with a mania for flying saucers hijacked a Portuguese airliner carrying 89 persons and took it on a wild seven-hour escapade across the Iberian peninsula before surrendering meekly to police.

Along the way, Rui Rodrigues, a thin 16-year-old, demanded to go to Switzerland and sought a ransom of $10 million.

But in Madrid, where he forced the Air Portugal Boeing 727 liner to put down in the only stop on the commandeered flight, he dropped both ransoms, released the 82 passengers in return for a promise to "go home" to Portugal.

The crew of seven complied with the demand, flying the high school student back to Lisbon and landing at Portela Airport, where Rodriguez waited 17 minutes on the craft before surrendering meekly to police.

The tense, short-lived drama began late Tuesday night when Rodrigues walked into the pilot's cabin of domestic flight 131 and, according to crew members, "with a quavering hand" pointed a revolver at Capt. Coutinho Ramos and demanded to fly to Madrid.

Police later said the gun wielded by the teen-ager was not loaded.

The hijacking took place just as the Lisbon to Faro airliner was scheduled to land in the capital of the Algarve resort coast. Instead, the aircraft carrying 43 foreigners headed for Madrid.

The hijacker's mother, Idalina Rodrigues, told Portugals' national radio that her son probably purchased his fare with $160 her husband had given the boy to pay the insurance on the family car.

Jupiter 15th moon discovered

WASHINGTON (AP) — A mysterious shadow in a picture snapped by the Voyager 1 spacecraft has led to the discovery of a 15th moon in orbit around the planet Jupiter, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported today.

It is the second new satellite located by the pair of Voyagers that swept past the planet last year. The other was found by scientists in a photo taken by Voyager 2.

Synnott recently was searching Voyager 1 images relayed March 5, 1979, just 4½ hours before the spacecraft made its closest approach to the planet, when he noticed "a shadow stepping across the face of Jupiter where no shadow should have been," NASA reported.

By studying other transmitted images, Synnott located evidence of the satellite in seven other photos and was able to calculate its size and orbital path.

He reported 1979 J2 is 69 to 80 kilometres in diameter and that it orbits Jupiter every 16 hours, 16 minutes at a distance of 151,113 kmabove the cloud tops. It is between the orbits of the satellites Amalthea and Io.

Pope lambastes African Marxism

Times News Services

NAIROBI — In a hard-hitting speech to Kenya's diplomatic corps, Pope John Paul II has denounced abuses of power, domination over the weak, corruption and tyranny in Africa.

The Pope, currently on a six-nation tour of Africa, also rejected atheistic ideologies as a guiding force for proper progress.

John Paul also issued an international appeal for help for the millions of refugees who have crossed various African borders.

He focused on Africa in his speech to the diplomatic corps and declared: "The truth about the African individual must be seen, first and foremost, in his or her dignity as a human person."

The Pope, who is opposed to Roman Catholic clergy holding elected office, later called on Christians to take part in politics as activists for good.

Jesus did not give the church an economic or political mission but "it would be a mistake to think that the individual Christian should not be involved in these areas of life," John Paul said during his visit in this Kenyan capital.

He said Christians "are called by God to be involved in the world in order to transform it according to the gospel."

"In the state, citizens have a right and duty to share in the political life. The duties of the good Christian citizen involve more than shunning corruption, more than not exploiting others. These duties include positively contributing to the establishment of just laws and structures that foster human values."

Last Sunday, aides of Representative Robert Drinan of Boston, Mass., the only priest in the U.S. Congress, said he lost an appeal of a decision by Jesuit authorities ordering him and other Catholic priests not to seek elected office.

Drinan announced Monday he will not seek a sixth term and is accepting the directive "with regret and pain."

The Pope said mass at an altar constructed in Freedom Park in central Nairobi. He spoke to a crowd that residents described as the largest ever assembled in Kenya. Unofficial estimates ranged upwards from 250,000. Catholic leaders had expected about 500,000.

Kenya has three million Catholics, 20 per cent of the population.

Carter pads his lead

The Associated Press

President Carter and Ronald Reagan are three-quarters of the way to rival nominations for the White House, and while their challengers insist they still can find openings, the time and the numbers are running out fast.

Democrat Carter and Republican Reagan made big leads bigger with triple landslide victories in Tuesday's Indiana, Tennessee and North Carolina presidential primary elections.

Senator Edward Kennedy and George Bush both said they have better elections days ahead. But unless those days come soon, they won't matter.

Kennedy and Bush won in the District of Columbia primaries. Kennedy easily outpolled Carter. Reagan wasn't even entered in the Republican election.

All in all, Carter gained 161 delegates Tuesday, running his total to 1,306 of the 1,666 it will take to win renomination. Kennedy picked up 62, for a total of 721.

Thus, Carter needs 360 of the 1,264 delegates still to be chosen in order to fashion a majority.

Kennedy said he has no thought of dropping his challenge to Carter.

"I never thought it was going to be easy," he said. "We realize we are the underdogs. But that's going to make us work a little harder, and that's what we intend to do."

CARSON

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Johnny Carson has signed a three-year contract to continue on The Tonight Show, which he began hosting more than 17 years ago.

The announcement was made in New York Tuesday by Edgar H. Griffiths, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of RCA, at its annual stockholders meeting. RCA is NBC's parent company.

Carson had said he wanted out as Tonight Show host before the April, 1981 expiration date of his old contract.

Under the new agreement, the show will be trimmed to an hour from its present 90 minutes starting in September, with Carson continuing to host four nights a week. NBC will still use guest hosts and reruns of old Carson shows on the fifth night, a network spokesman said.

The network stands to lose a substantial chunk of advertising revenue by trimming a half hour from the show. In response to a question, however, Griffiths said Tuesday that NBC (or Carson) had "some very interesting ideas" for the last half hour.

Cuban exodus hassles grow

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — With more than 4,000 refugees a day arriving here aboard the "Freedom Flotilla" — now mostly straight from Cuban prisons — another 300 National Guards have been dispatched to Key West.

And the flood of arrivals swelled to more than 20,000.

Meanwhile, federal officials said supplies and personnel were on the way after President Carter declared a state of emergency, making $10 million available to Florida.

Carter this week made an impassioned plea for an "open door" policy towards the Cubans, and Washington was reported to be considering an airlift to speed up the flow of immigrants.

Opening lead — three of diamonds.

Let's assume you're East and your partner leads a diamond against three notrump. Dummy plays the queen, which you win with the ace, but what would you do next? You shouldn't automatically return partner's suit, especially since declarer, by playing dummy's queen, seems to be trying to get you to do so.

Note that in the actual case South easily scores nine tricks if you return a diamond. But the correct return of the deuce of hearts defeats the contract, and the question is how you can know this from the limited evidence at hand.

Your first obligation, at trick one, is to try to figure out declarer's distribution. The easiest way to do that is to analyze, from the bidding, how many cards declarer is likely to have in each suit.

Thus, it is easy to conclude that South started with exactly four diamonds. West led his fourth-best diamond, the three, and must have the deuce because, if South had the deuce, he would have five diamonds, which is impossible on the bidding.

You also know that South has three spade — neither more nor less. (He would have raised spades again with four of them.) That accounts for 7 of declarer's 13 cards.

Declarer is also apt to have exactly four clubs — not simply because he bid the suit, but because he presumably would have bid one notrump over one spade with 3-3-4-3 distribution. He can't have five clubs, because that would give him a singleton heart — obviously inconsistent with the bidding.

It follows from all this that South's distribution is 3-2-4-4. So, at trick two, you play a low heart, won by West with the queen. He returns his fourth-best heart, on which you follow low, and South is then sure to go down one.

We have 2334 for the game today. One 4, one 2 and two 3's. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols, and no words. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also powers and roots. For example, 33 + 4 — 2 is a solution for 35.

Yesterday's answer: BABA was 5454 (even).

Person bites second only to dog bites

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nearly 1,000 people were bitten by other people in New York City last year, making human nips the second most frequent kind of bite, behind dog bites.

There were 973 reported human bites last year, a 27 percent rise over a year earlier and health Commissioner Reinaldo Ferrer said officials are worried that the increase "exposes a growing, serious health problem."

He said dog bites, far in the lead with 15,814 cases last year, have been declining, mostly through better enforcement of leash laws. Men and boys, especially those involved in a fight, are most prone to bites as are abused children. Controlling human biting, Ferrer said, is not as easy as enforcing an animal law.

"The public should realize that this type of injury can lead to serious problems including infection, deformity and amputation," Ferrer said.

gardening
hilda beastall

Amateur gardeners can quite well grow a few chrysanthemums for cut flowers in the home, and for garden decoration. Flowers suited for exhibiting at flower shows are a rather different story but it may be learned after making a beginning in a less demanding way.

A half dozen young plants may be bought now at a garden centre or nursery. Choose colors you want, and keep them labelled so that you have at least an idea of what to expect.

There are many kinds, with different appearance of flowers, and times of bloom, but until you make a beginning, it is scarcely possible to be acquainted with them.

The plants when bought will likely be between 10 and 20 cm in height; one single stem, having a good rootball between 8 and 10 cm in diameter, including the soil which should not be shaken off or disturbed. These will have been grown from cuttings of stock plants, taken off for rooting in a greenhouse probably in March, or according to variety, and heating space available.

First to consider is the location and preparation of the space in your garden where the chrysanthemums are to be grown.

These are not plants to tuck in anywhere. They should have full sun for most of the day, but an hour or two shade from house or trees is tolerated, but not more.

I suggest the plants will do better for a first trial if planted in a group where their care will be likely attended to; one metre apart each way is about right for general garden display.

Dig the plot of ground well, breaking up hard lumps; then add old rotted manure liberally for the humus value. If no manure, an equal amount of rotted compost and coarse peatmoss previously well saturated overnight in a tub and stirred until free water has soaked in.

It is however preferable to the fine grind for most of our garden soils need it to hold moisture during summer, but only for those plants which do not mind a soil somewhat acid.

Place a support stake at each planting space, this prevents root damage later when support is needed. Remove container from plant (if there is one) and set plant at same height into a hole of suitable size. Water well, and keep area free of weed growth.

The aim is also to keep the soil moist throughout summer but not soaking wet. The humus of compost, old manure or peatmoss is to hold a reserve of moisture at all times. This will be if water is applied deeply at regular intervals of 7 to 10 days according to whether your soil is inclined to be of sand or clay.

If each of your chrysanthemum plants has a single stem with no branching, let it become established for a week after planting and then pinch out the growing tip to encourage the plant to put out three side branches which will bear good flowers from earliest fall. You will notice buds forming as the daylight hours become shorter from late July.

Disbudding is not needed for garden display, but it is interesting to take one plant and remove the central flower bud on each of the three stems to increase the number of flower heads later. On another plant, rub out some of the tiny buds in the leaf axils as they appear, and watch the effect on the remaining flower buds.

As hot weather comes, perhaps late June, a mulch of compost, old manure or even dry grass cuttings around each plant will help to conserve moisture in the soil, but don't forget that the soil must never dry out. Artificial watering will still be needed regularly, but the mulch prevents drying and cracking of the soil.

Follow these general ideas which are after all only ordinary garden plant culture for herbaceous perennials, and you should have chrysanthemum flowers in plenty right up to and including Thanksgiving.

EATON'S

The few who devour most hospital resources

By ROBERT REINHOLD
New York Times

WASHINGTON — The findings of two new studies have shed light on who puts the heaviest burden on the U.S. health care system, an important factor in establishing any economically feasible plan for national health insurance.

In the more ambitious of the two studies, a survey of the records of 2,238 patients in six hospitals, mostly in Boston, concluded that a mere 13 per cent of the patients used as much medical and hospital services as the remaining 87 per cent. If that reflects the national picture, then only 13 per cent of the population consumes more than half the hospital resources. One in 10 Americans enters a hospital each year.

This study, published last week in The New England Journal of Medicine, also found that the high-cost patients were far more likely to smoke cigarettes, abuse alcohol, be overweight or engage in other "adverse lifestyles."

The second study offers partial confirmation of this. Alcohol abusers were found to use 1½ times more medical services than other members of health maintenance organizations, according to the study, done by the Rhode Island Group Health Association. The findings were reported in Boston at the 1980 Group Health Institute, sponsored by the Group Health Association of America.

The findings are hardly surprising, given the known health consequences of such habits as smoking, overeating and alcohol abuse. But the full extent of their effect on the health insurance system has seldom been so explicitly documented.

If Congress ever resolves its deliberations and establishes a practicable national health insurance scheme, health care analysts believe it will have to come up with an ironclad mechanism to control costs if the plan is to be kept from foundering.

However, the history of attempts to control health costs has been discouraging. The cost of Medicare, the federal health insurance plan for the aged enacted in 1965, has staggered the federal budget at a time of growing resentment over taxes and inflation. Spending for Medicare has doubled every four years, reaching $34 billion this year. And overall medical costs in the United States have swelled to 9 per cent of the gross national product, double the figure of 25 years ago.

Debate, as much political as economic, rages over how best to contain costs. But whatever plan wins out, it will have to be designed with some idea of what kinds of people are most likely to use medical care and try to reduce their use. The present "fee for service" system contains what the economist Alain C. Enthoven, in his new book Health Plan, calls a "complex of perverse incentives" that reward excessive care.

The disproportionate use of hospital services by a small group may hold lessons for the framers of national health insurance. The catastrophic coverage embodied in President Carter's version would be subject to a $2,500 deductible. But according to Christopher J. Zook, co-author of the first study with Francis D. Moore, the noted and now retired chief of surgery at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston, the cost estimates based on this figure may be wrong because of the "skewness" in patient demand found in the hospital-records survey.

"We spend a lot of time worrying about cost control for low-cost people," said Zook, who did the study as a Ph.D. candidate at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard, adding that perhaps more attention should be focused on the small number who devour most of the hospital resources.

In the study, 10 days in 1976 were randomly selected and 2,238 patients discharged on those days from the six hospitals were identified. Then their medical and billing records were analyzed by computer to see what kinds of patients correlated with highest costs.

The high-cost patients were far more likely to suffer from such disorders as: alcoholism and its effects, benign inflammatory bowel diseases, cancer, congenital defects, renal failure and chronic degenerative vascular diseases of the heart and peripheral vessels.

Further, among the high-cost patients, repeated hospitalization for the same disease was more common than a single costly hospitalization or prolonged hospitalization as the source of the expense. This underscores, the authors say, the need to focus on chronic disease in any forecasting of medical costs.

Although the study avoided drawing a causal connection, it demonstrated unequivocally a link between "unhealthy habit" and costly disease. From 31 to 69 per cent of the high-cost patients, depending on the hospital, had habits like smoking and drinking, while only 20 to 45 per cent of the low-cost ones did.

Artificial arm with sense of touch

BLACKSBURG, Va. (UPI) — An artificial arm that for the first time would give amputees a sense of touch has been developed by a Virginia Tech graduate student who lost an arm in a farm accident.

"It still has bugs that need to be worked out but it has the realism of being practical in a short time," Roy Davis, 24, of South Boston said Monday when he displayed the device at the Conference on Bio-Fluid Mechanics at Virginia Tech.

Davis said his device has a wrist that allows rotation because of a modified ball and socket joint. The standard "Dorrence Hook," developed in 1951 for amputees, is straight and allows little mobility.

Davis' device is strapped to the shoulder like the conventional artificial limb, but instead of hooks the grasping mechanism resembles a pipe wrench.

Fluids will be used in substitute "fingers" to act as a medium for transmission of sensory feedback from the artificial hand to the brain, much like normal fingers, he said.

The device uses cables running from the hand portion up to the shoulder that are inside the arm, as opposed to the Dorrence device which has exterior cables. The device is controlled by the shoulder and back muscles, similar to conventional artificial limbs.

Dr. Daniel Schneck, who as chairman of the Virginia Tech Department of Engineering Science has worked with Davis for the past three years, said, "what we are doing is we're plagiarizing an idea of nature."

Davis emphasized that his work is incomplete and he still must devise the proper material to cover the so-called fingers.

"We're not hastening into this, we're aware of the shortcomings," said Davis, who is an instructor in the engineering science department.

Davis, who lost his left arm above the elbow in 1973 when it was caught in a hay baler, said there are 5,000 to 6,000 people in the United States with one or two arms amputated. Of those, 50 percent use no artificial limbs because they consider the devices too difficult to manipulate.

Doctors no longer scoffing at cures from trees, reefs

SUVA, Fiji (CP) — For centuries South Pacific island witch doctors have been credited with miracle cures using natural medicines obtained from trees, plants and the reefs.

Scientists throughout the South Pacific are taking a new look as a result of Australian research into obtaining medicines from these tropical sources.

Frogs, sponges, starfish, coneshells, sea cucumbers and numerous types of coral are being looked at.

Scientists see the reef as being able to provide assistance in cancer control, brain and heart surgery and muscle relaxation.

They have discovered that the ugly sea cucumber has a type of poison in its system. In small doses the poison, filtered by the skin, can act as an anti-tumor agent in the heart and brain. It also fights bacteria and acts as an antibiotic.

The clam also has a toxin which fights unwanted tissue bodies which form tumors.

Times News Services

BELGRADE — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev arrived in Belgrade today to attend the funeral of Josip Broz Tito amid European press criticism of U.S. President Carter for failing to make the trip.

Brezhnev arrived at the head of a Soviet delegation that also included Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and the Soviet ambassador to Yugoslavia, Nicholai Radionov.

West German newspapers described Brezhnev's visit to Belgrade as diplomatic one-upmanship highlighting Carter's uncertain foreign policy and making a mockery of his pledge to support Yugoslavia's independence.

The Sueddeutsche Zeitung saw Brezhnev's visit as a skillfully timed diplomatic trick, and suggested snidely that "Carter, apparently, wants to punish the Soviet leadership by ignoring them."

And in London, The Times said Carter's decision not to attend was another grave mistake by a "muddled" man "blind to whole areas of reality."

In a lead editorial, The Times said Carter showed himself "blind to the stature of President Tito, to the importance of Yugoslavia, to the mood of the Yugoslav people, to the interests of the United States and, once again, to the sound views of his own department of state."

When the Yugoslavs look around at Tito's funeral "for the superpower on whom, if all else fails, they may have to rely for their security and independence, and what do they see? They see Mr. Carter's mother and Mr. Mondale".

Moscow "trumped us," said an American journalist who has covered Eastern Europe for many years said. He said Brezhnev's unexpected visit was aimed at driving "a wedge between the United States and its allies."

Yugoslav officials, while saying nothing publicly, privately indicated that they would have preferred to see Carter, the acknowledged leader of the West, at the funeral of a man who defied the Kremlin and tried keep a carefully balanced position between East and West.

A White House official said Carter decided to skip the funeral because he believed it would be inappropriate to make a foreign trip while American hostages were still being held in Iran.

In his stead, Carter sent U.S. Vice-president Mondale and his mother, Lillian, to represent the United States at Thursday's funeral for the founder of modern Yugoslavia and co-founder of the nonaligned bloc of nations, which is shaping up as one of the biggest gatherings of world leaders in modern history.

Mondale arrived shortly before Brezhnev and reaffirmed in a statement that the U.S. would stand behind 30 years of support for Yugoslavia's independence, territorial integrity and unity. "It has not changed with the passing of their great leader," he said.

In Washington, meanwhile, it was reported that the U.S. Secretary of State-designate Sen. Edmund Muskie will meet in Vienna next week with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Gromyko and Muskie will be in Vienna next week for ceremonies marking the 25th anniversary of the treaty that gave Austria its post-war independence.

The meeting will be the first U.S.-Soviet Union encounter at the ministerial level since the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan began last December.

(The Senate foreign relations committee today approved Muskie's nomination to replace Cyrus Vance in the key administration post, paving the way for its confirmation by the full Senate.)

Trudeau answer on coal deal aid angers Bennett

B.C.'s multi-million dollar coal deal with Japan — bogged down in political red tape as the federal and provincial governments haggle over financial commitments — has hit another snag.

The B.C. government, which has reached approval in principle with the Japanese to export 5.3 million tonnes of metallurgical coal a year, has been trying to get more federal money for a spur line into the northeastern B.C. coal fields.

Some additional money appeared certain after a meeting of federal-provincial cabinet ministers in Victoria on Monday.

Senator Bud Olson, economic development minister, told a news conference Ottawa's commitment to the "over-all requirement to get coal into export position was enhanced as a result of this meeting."

However, government sources now say Premier Bill Bennett was irate after Tuesday's meeting in Vancouver with Prime Minister Trudeau when Trudeau indicated he wanted concessions on the Alaska Highway pipeline project.

The provincial government has been trying for two years to get Ottawa to discuss federal support for roads, schools and townsite development that will be neccessary when the pipeline, which will cross through northern B.C., is built.

The government source says Trudeau surprised Bennett with his demand that B.C. will have to drop its request for federal funding for the pipeline infrastructure in exchange for the increased support from Ottawa for the northeast coal proposal.

Bennett held a special cabinet meeting this morning to discuss the coal negotiations but had no comment when the meeting ended.

B.C. Industry Minister Don Phillips wouldn't say what was discussed at the cabinet meeting but said he was confident the two governments could resolve their differences.

"A pipeline is a pipeline is a pipeline and a railway is a railway is a railway . . . we'll negotiate the two of them separately," he said.

There has been talk that the province will go ahead with the project, which is expected to provide an estimated $70 million a year to provincial coffers, on its own.

Meanwhile, Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira left Canada today with a strong indication that if this country wants to ship more than rocks and unfinished goods to his country, its policy on foreign investment should be "as liberal as possible."

Speaking at a news conference Tuesday after two days of talks here and in Ottawa with Prime Minister Trudeau, Ohira said he understood Canada's desire to ship more job-producing, finished products to Japan.

Air Canada 1979 profit at $55.4M

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada's after-tax profit rose 17 per cent to a record $55.4 million in 1979, enabling the airline to return a dividend of $13.2 million to the federal government.

Claude Taylor, Air Canada's president and chief executive officer, said Tuesday the airline "has proven itself to be commercially successful" while at the same time fulfilling "its mandate of public service."

However, he said in his annual report that rising costs — and consumer resistance to higher air fares — may have a negative impact on earnings this year.

Taylor said fares rose about 10 per cent in 1979, compared with an increase of about 32 per cent by airlines in the United States. He added that Air Canada's fares "must inevitably rise" further this year in the face of increased fuel costs and continuing inflation.

During 1979, the airline carried 12.8 million passengers and 158,950 tons of cargo. Special low fares for surplus seats attracted nearly 400,000 passengers.

Embassy death toll now 7

Times News Services

LONDON — Police today put the death toll in the Iranian embassy siege at seven — five terrorists and two hostages — after firemen removed the remains of the last three bodies from the building

With one terrorist in custody, police said this confirmed suspicions that there were six gunmen in the Iranian Arab gang that seized the embassy last Wednesday and took 26 persons, mostly Iranians, hostage.

Iran's revolutionary government said it will ask for the extradition of the surviving terrorist, but Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was reported determined to resist the request.

Meanwhile, investigators at Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist squad said the rifles, machine guns and hand grenades used by a half dozen gunmen to storm the Iranian embassy last week may have been smuggled into Britain in diplomatic pouches.

The siege ended Monday when Britain's Special Air Service commando regiment stormed the embassy, killing five of the terrorists and rescuing the remaining 19 hostages.

One hostage, press attache Abbas Lavasani, was executed by the terrorists Monday.

The body of a second hostage killed, Ali Akbar Samadzadeh, was taken from the rubble today, police said. Five had been released earlier.

Two hostages remained in a hospital. One, Akmed Dadgar, was reported still in serious condition with gunshot wounds. The other, Charge d'Affaires Gholam-Ali Afrouz, was said to be in satisfactory condition.

Autopsies were being performed on the victims and until results were known police would not confirm that the terrorists were killed by commando gunfire. Police also declined to comment on the identities of the gunmen.

The surviving terrorist, whose identity police have not revealed, was held under special armed guard at a London police station.

Quoting a spokesman for Iran's ruling Revolutionary Council, Radio Tehran said today that as soon as his name was announced, the Iranian Foreign Ministry would ask for his extradition.

But police sources said he will be tried in Britain for murder and kidnapping.

Saudis curbing travel by women

BEIRUT (AP) — Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia has barred women from travelling abroad to study, a Saudi newspaper reports.

The desert kingdom, wary of "unfavorable" influences in the West, is also taking steps to keep its young men at home, according to reports reaching here.

Even women accompanied by their husbands are forbidden to leave Saudi Arabia for study, Fahd was quoted as saying by the newspaper Al Jazira.

Informed sources here said the orders were prompted by the tragic love affair between Princess Misha and a suitor. The two were executed in 1977 in accordance with the Islamic penalty for adultery.

A television documentary about the affair entitled Death of a Princess drew strong protests from the oil-producing desert kingdom when it was shown recently in Britain. The princess had first met her Saudi lover at the American University of Beirut.

Saudi state radio, monitored here, quoted Defence Minister Nayef Bin Abdel Aziz as saying Tuesday that the number of Saudi males studying abroad will be kept to a minimum.

The crown prince's reported orders preceded ratification of an ambitious $300-billion five-year development plan, prompting one news commentator here to question the wisdom of pressing for economic development without educated women.

Liquor taxes provide jolt

Consumers got a jolt in liquor stores today as federal excise tax increases pushed the price of some products up by $1 or more.

The excise tax changes announced in April took effect this morning.

In addition, some products were going up in any case.

As a result, many brands of vodka, rum and brandy were up more than $1 as of today.

There were also signficant price increases for wines.

The federal excise tax changes effective today include an additional 35 and-a-half cents on brandy, 43 cents on fortified wines and 11 cents on spirits.

Beer prices were increased on April 23.

Slapstick survival for SC

By JAKE BANKY

The Socred government teetered on the brink of a serious embarrassment Tuesday but managed to survive, if still a little red in the face.

For a while it appeared the NDP had caught the government napping and was going to defeat the Socreds on a vote in the legislature.

In scenes more appropriate to slapstick comedy than parliamentary propriety, the Socreds managed to pull a 26-26 tie vote out of the fire.

The tie meant an automatic defeat for an NDP challenge of a ruling by Deputy Speaker Walter Davidson.

The NDP claimed she is barred from doing so under the provisions of the Constitution Act.

Civil servants indicate she has been collecting her $31,500 MLA's salary but not the additional $24,000-a-year minister's stipend.

Jordan herself said absolutely nothing.

She would not tell the legislature Tuesday whether she had or had not collected a full minister's salary since her appointment Jan. 11.

And she refused to come out of the house to speak with reporters.

On a bulletin board just outside the chamber someone posted an envelope with the message: Patricia Jordan Salary Fund. Give generously.

The NDP came into the house obviously aware that the odds — usually 30-26 in favor of the Socreds, not counting the Speaker — had been drastically reduced.

Every NDP seat was filled but there were several gaps in the Socred ranks.

Premier Bill Bennett, Intergovernmental Relations Minister Garde Gardom and Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt were attending official functions in Vancouver and Speaker Harvey Schroeder is still on the sick list.

While Bennett has said he would not feel compelled to call an election if he lost a vote in the legislature, such a defeat would be considered a serious embarrassment.

The action started when Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber called for an emergency debate on the possibility that Jordan had been receiving her minister's salary illegally.

Barber told the house the Constitution Act permits appointment of up to 23 cabinet ministers but clearly states that no more than 19 of them may receive a salary.

"If she has been in re-
